ROUGH WEATHER ON CORSICAN TRIP

The Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd. liner Corsican arrived in port this morning from Southampton, Antwerp and Havre with eighty-five cabin and 277 third class passengers. During the voyage the liner encountered continuous head winds and high seas and was considerably delayed. Aside from the continuous bad weather Captain Hamilton said nothing transpired during the voyage.

Among the passengers was Major F. Mortimer of Kew, Alta., who is returning to the west with his bride. Major Mortimer played a noteworthy part in the great war with the British forces under General Chetwick in Egypt. He was in charge of supplies, ammunition, etc., during General Allenby's great invasion.

The passengers were sent forward to their destinations in the regular C. P. R. trains this afternoon.

POLICE COURT

The preliminary hearing of a case against Allan Stevens, charged with the theft of cloth to the value of $150, the Mrs. Chappell, he replied that the some time between January 29 and February 1, was commenced this morning in the police court. H. H. McLean, Jr., appeared for the C. P. R., and J. A. Barry for the defendant.

C. P. R. Investigator Ritten told of a visit with Detective Biddiscombe to the rooms of Mrs. Chappell in Simonds street on February 28. He said they found the piece of cloth in a trunk in a small trunk. There was a piece of old rose silk, also.

He said the cloth was found on the west side of the defendant at No. 6 shed. Asked where he got the cloth he had given to Mrs. Chappell, he replied that he had bought it from a stranger at the foot of Main street some time about last October.

He signed a statement—produced in court in the presence of the two officers. The witness made further inquiries and laid information resulting in the arrest of the accused last night. On cross-examination he said that the accused had said "about October" and not "some time in October," as was written in the signed statement. The value of the piece of cloth in court, he said, was about $6 or $7.

The case was postponed until Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, when it is understood there will be about six witnesses called.

Thomas White and a juvenile were before the court this morning, the former charged with trespassing on C. N. R. property, and the latter with theft of coal from a car in the yard. The juvenile pleaded guilty.

C. N. R. Constable Barden told of seeing the two yesterday afternoon. White, he said, was on a fence adjoining the property of the railway and the other lad was in a car. He saw some bags under his arm when he was going towards the yard. The witness and Constable Morrissey arrested them, but could not find the bags. The juvenile said he had been taking coal all winter and was trying to get a little ahead for the summer.

The mother of the young lad said that the boy was living with his brother-in-law, as she had married again after his father's death. In answer to a question from the magistrate as to whether she had any objection to his being sent to the Boys' Industrial Home, where he would get good care, she said he was getting good care now. His Honor said that the boy's hands and face were dirty and that the boy said he didn't have any clothes good enough to go to Sunday school in. He sent them into his office to talk over the matter. Later he went in himself and spoke to the boy, who said that he didn't want to go to the Boys' Industrial Home and that he would never do anything wrong again if he was allowed to go. His pleadings were of no avail, however, and when he threw himself on the floor the magistrate sent him down stairs with the other.

GRAPHIC TALES OF RESCUES AT SEA

On the second day they sighted a ship and made frantic efforts to attract her attention, but she passed on little realizing that in the distance human beings were on the verge of losing their reason or their lives. Hour by hour the men huddled together scanning the horizon for some passing vessel. Eighty hours after leaving their sinking vessel they sighted the Belgian steamship Persier. One of the crew filled a canvas bucket with kerosene, took off a part of his coat to act as a torch and set fire to it. The darkness was intense, but watchful eyes had detected a light in the distance.

The Last Match.

The wind extinguished the light and the men discovered that they had only one wax match left. With great precautions under the shelter of the sail they struck the last match to make a flare and fired their last cartridge. This was successful and they succeeded in attracting the attention of the Persier. At the time the lookout saw the flare it was fifteen degrees below zero. The men were treated with every kindness and on arrival at Antwerp were placed in St. Elizabeth's Hospital where they were treated.

The crew consisted of Captain Northworthy, Silas Blagdon, mate, George Forenew, cook, George Gordon, Thomas Burton and George Duffett, able seamen. The crew shipped on the Corsican from Antwerp and are enroute to their homes in Newfoundland.

Another's Experience.

There was another shipwrecked crew on the Corsican, that of the three-masted schooner Optimist of Newfoundland, owned by A. E. Hickmann Co., Ltd., St. John's. Captain Evans told the following story to the Times after the Corsican docked at Sand Point:—

"We sailed from Bonanza, Spain, on January 1, sail laden. At that time the weather was good and fair winds prevailed. This continued until January 14, when a strong wind sprang up from the southwest to the northwest. At four o'clock in the afternoon it had increased at an alarming degree and we lost our forward mast. On January 15 the storm was raging and the wind blowing from the northwest. We were laying under double reefed mainsail and foretrysail. At three o'clock we lost staysail.

"During the next three days the gale continued, and on the morning of the 19th we lost our mainsail. At this time the wind had veered to the southwest and for the remainder of that day and the following we were under a storm sail. On the 21st we lost our rudder and had no control of the vessel. A temporary rudder was rigged, but it was so rough and we had not sufficient sail to manage. On January 22 the vessel was leaking badly and we were forced to keep the pumps going every ten minutes.

"For three days the winds kept up and heavy seas were running. The decks were under water all of the time, and the pumps were kept continuously manned. On January 26 a big wave broke over the ship and smashed the lifeboat, partially wrecked the cabin and shifted the cargo, throwing us over on one starboard side. The crew were unable to do anything during this trying time and all were lashed to the rigging. Six hours later an effort was made to get in the hold and shift the cargo. We succeeded in righting the ship, but the water by this time was two feet deep on the forecastle floor, and both pumps were kept going all the time, but the best efforts of the men were unavailing, as the water kept gaining steadily.

"That night we sighted the S. S. City of Naples, which we signalled, and she came near and laid to until three p. m. The weather was so bad and the seas running so high that they were unable to take us off. They informed us that another ship was rushing to our assistance and they proceeded on their voyage, but the other ship, the Ampetco, did not reach us until seven a. m. on the 28th. By this time the schooner was completely waterlogged. We were taken on board the steamer, which was bound for Antwerp, where we arrived on February 7. During the voyage the captain and crew gave us every attention."

Captain Evans and his crew are also enroute to their homes in Newfoundland.

NORTH END SOCIAL.

A successful "hoot" social was held under the auspices of the North End circle of the Ladies' Aid in Portland Methodist church Y. M. A. hall, last evening. Rev. H. B. Clarke, pastor of the church, presided. The programme consisted of a piano solo by Miss Vera Corbett; a vocal solo by Miss Madeline Daley; a piano duet by the Misses Alberta and Irene Brown; a reading by Miss Turner; a piano duet by the Misses Chown and Craft. Refreshments were served by the following committee: Mrs. J. Ferguson, Mrs. W. M. Irons, and Mrs. B. G. Lingley, assisted by Mrs. R. A. Corbett, Mrs. C. E. Cowan, Mrs. S. Kirk, Mrs. C. Higgins and Miss C. McIntyre.
