CARRETA HAS LONG HISTORY

Ancient Indian Vehicle That Has Been in Use Over Two Hundred Years

The ancient carreta, now in the exhibit room of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, has had an eventful history, as was shown by the fact that it was purchased by a local Indian, eighty-five years ago, and that it had belonged to his great-grandfather and that it had been exhibited at a local fiesta years before as the oldest carreta in the neighborhood. From those facts, well substantiated, and the great age to which Indians live, as a rule, this ancient carreta is estimated to be much over 200 years old. It was purchased by Captain Newton Chittenden, a noted Indian explorer, antiquarian and ethnologist, now living in Pomona, Cal.

On November 23, 1898, this old time cart left Redlands, Cal., on its own wheels and reached Los Angeles December 15, a distance of over sixty miles. Captain Chittenden accompanied it, camping on the way and walked most of the distance, watching with anxious eyes to see that it did not fall to pieces, like the "deacon's wonderful one-horse hay," from its great age. But it survived the journey in good shape and was hauled to the Chamber of Commerce exhibit room, where, sheltered from wind and weather, it may remain a possible 200 years more.

The wheels are made of cross sections of a yucca tree, 28 inches in diameter and about six inches thick at the outer rim. The hubs are of one piece with the body of the wheel and are regularly extended out to a length of 18 inches. Wooden pins through the axle secure the clumsy wheels. The body of the carreta is made of wood, excepting the tongue, which is a twisted and gnarled stick of mesquite four feet long. It was driven by one hitched to the horns with thongs of rawhide. Its counterpart may be seen in the country districts of Mexico today, drawn in a similar manner, as this was when new, 200 years and more ago.

DEAD IN ST. STEPHEN

St. Stephen, N. B., Aug. 27.—(Special)—Mrs. Margaret Lockary, widow of John Lockary, passed away at her home in Prince William street this morning from stomach trouble. She was sixty-nine years of age, leaves six sons and four daughters.

Dr. Joseph L. Lockary, of Roburary, Mass., Father Lockary, of Albert county, John and Fred, of Boston, Edmund and Lewis are the sons and the daughters are Sister Carmelita, of Portland, Gertrude, Margaret and Catherine. The funeral will be on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock.

Miss Lugin's Course Concerts

The many friends of the Misses Lugin will be delighted to learn that they have been splendidly encouraged in their endeavor to introduce "David Bingham," baritone, on September 5, and "Miss Mary Hall," the great American pianist on October 11. The subscribers' sale of seats will begin at Landry's Music Store tomorrow morning, at ten o'clock, and, as the list of intending patrons is a large one, it will be wise for subscribers to call early in the day. The public sale will not commence until three days later, the giving those who have guaranteed the success of the concert every opportunity.

Miss Lugin is depending upon those who have registered their promise to purchase and trusts that all such will participate in the pleasure which these very great artists can so well convey.
