Woodstock Turn Down the Colts in a Base Ball Game

The Woodstock's had their batting clothes on Thursday and turned down the Colts at Victoria Park by a score of 11-8. The game was full of hits, the visitors piling up a total of 21, including two three-baggers and five two-baggers. They clinched the game in the fourth, when six hits off Burnet's delivery, including three-bagger and a double, one charity and two men hit by pitched ball, netted them 8 runs.

First three innings, but in the fourth he was off color. The above "accident" all happened before two men were out, and then Cook was put on the rubber. The visitors also had his eye on Cook's delivery and hit him pretty hard for the balance of the game. The Woodstock's played a fair game in the field, Tipton being easily the star. He covers a lot of ground, but a number of the Colts were unable to find him as successfully as they have other pitchers. The locals played a fairly good game in the field, the game being the weak spot during the game. Myers put up the game of his life at short stop. Nearly every one of his ten chances were difficult, and his error was made on a very high fly.
The game behind the bat was also good. He got them on all sides and his good stops out of a number of runs. He only had a good "whip" he would make the best of them hustle the catcher. Partio put up a good game at second and notwithstanding he made two errors, he accepted of difficult chances. The old reliable on first took everything that came his way. Cross got a bad fall in the first part of the game and in falling he killed his glider. The little fender got under a high fly after a long run, and he returned the ball in time to stop the runner at second, when it looked like a homer. His error was in dropping a fly after a long run. Blooalso did some good work in centre. returned the ball very quickly after long hits and his one catch was the "circuit variety." His error was an overthrow to the plate from deep centre.

AN EXCITING BULL.
A wild young bull which was being taken through town on Wednesday created some excitement around the market. It became frightened at its surroundings and broke away from the men holding it, ran through Walker Bros. livery stable and made a bee line for home. Those who witnessed the incident say the contest was more exciting than the tug-of-war between the pork-pickers and milk condensers at the recent picnic.

SHOULD FALL WHEAT BE SOWN.

The Farmer's Advocate on the Problem.

AN AFFIRMATIVE ANSWER.

But Late Sowing is Advisable to Ensure the Success of the Crop.

The question whether it is wise for farmers in the sections of the country in which winter wheat has formerly been successfully grown to continue to sow it, in the face of the invasion of the Hessian fly, which in many districts has this year been so very destructive, is a problem which calls for serious consideration at the present time. While it is true that with the market prices at present and for many years past prevailing there has been little if any profit in this crop, and, owing to the constant waxing of the world's wheat field, the prospect of improvement in prices in the future, yet we are by no means disposed to take a pessimistic view of the situation or to seek to discourage farmers from growing to a limited extent, this most valuable of all farm crops to handle.
The preparation of the land for the crop and the seed-sowing comes in at a time when the work interferes little with other operations on the farm, and the same may be said of the harvesting. It is certainly the best of all grain crops in the average of seasons with which to secure a catch of clover and grass seeds, and which takes a convenient and useful pace in a rotation having in view the maximum use of the fertility of the farm. It is a crop that has successfully run the gauntlet of many invaders and other enemies in its past history, including its latest foe, the Hessian fly, which has come and gone in former years, returning recently to attack with renewed vigor, and which, we are confident, can, by intelligent management, be outgummed and vanquished from the field.
Scientists who have studied the diseases of the fly assure us that its eggs are laid in the latter half of August and the first three weeks of September, and this fact suggests the most feasible means of checking and cheating the pest, which is to delay the seeding until the female have laid their eggs elsewhere and have perished from the effects of frost or reached the limit of life, the objection to late seeding in dry autumn is that the plants in average seasons fail to secure sufficient strength and vigor to withstand the severe frosts of winter, but we submit that it is worth considering whether, if the preparation of the land were commenced early and frequent surface cultivation given it, especially after any showers of rain (that may fall, sufficient moisture may not be retained and the mechanical condition of the soil made such that the germination of the seed and the growth of the plant may be hastened, though later started and thus rendered quite as strong at the approach of winter as under the former practice of sowing earlier in a drier and less prepared seed bed. Early sowing, when the fall months prove moist and warm, is often fatal to the wheat crop, the growth of top being so great that it rots under the water covering of snow and proves a failure, and the richer the land and the more perfect preparation, the more likely is failure from this cause to be experienced. If, as seems highly probable, the secret of success in evading the attack of the fly lies in the management of the soil and the time of seeding, it would seem the part of wisdom to endeavor to find the happy medium, the dividing line between failure and fortune, and to follow that line. The best way with the sowing of clean, pump and well-selected seed of a variety that has been tested and proven suitable to the soil and climatic conditions of the section, should make the cultivation of the crop a fairly safe venture where it has at any time succeeded.
It has been suggested that by sowing narrow strips on each side of the field about the first of September, and plowing these down after the flies have laid their eggs and before the later sowing has advanced far enough to be attacked, a large percentage of the larvae may be destroyed. This expedient may be well worth trying, as it is not expensive or unreasonable. If one were giving advice, it would doubtless be safe to advise the sowing of less land than usual to wheat, sowing somewhat later than has been the rule, and only on good land in a well prepared and compacted, to sow early on unfit and ill prepared ground, in to court probable failure and disappointment through the loss of the furnishing food for the perpetuation of the insect pest.—Farmer's Advocate.
