States more intimate and cordial to a friendly and stable understanding for the future. The significance of the occasion is national, first, the recognition of national kinship, second, the compliment to the navy of a kindred power which alone among the nations of the world shares with our own, a common inheritance of glory, and last but not least, it is a spontaneous expression of gratitude to Capt. Mahan for the skill and mastery with which he has led the great epic of the British naval achievements and awakened in the mind of the nation a new sense of what it owes to its sea powers.

Rosebery's Triumph. LONDON, May 25.—The debate on the budget bill, which was expected in some quarters to prove the downfall of Lord Rosebery's ministry, was opened Tuesday afternoon by Sir John Lubbock, Liberal-Unionist, member for London University, who moved in the House of Commons that the budget committee be empowered to divide the budget bill into two parts and to embody the provisions respecting the sinking fund in a different measure.

On Monday Mr. Edgar moved the following resolution which had been on the Order paper for some time, and which was generally styled the "Universal Peace" Resolution. "That it appears on the 16th June, 1893, the following resolution was proposed by the first minister, the Right Honourable W. E. Gladstone, and seconded by the Hon. Mr. Chamberlain, and carried by a majority of 46 for the Government. The announcement was greeted with prolonged Liberal cheers. Later, two other conservative resolutions to the budget committee were ruled out of order and the house went into committee of the whole, amid renewed Liberal cheering.

Referring to the threatened desertion of Welsh members of parliament Lord Rosebery said the Welsh disestablishment bill would be passed before the government's appeal to the country. If the disestablishment bill were passed, the government's honesty and honor the sooner they carried their threats into effect the better. He could never consent to be a minister on suffrage.

Lord Rosebery said he was bound from the bottom of his heart to the Irish party in parliament for coming forward to the assistance of the government in a critical division. The Liberal, he said, would not soon forget their action.

Mr. Coxe, who organized a lot of traps and other idle people under the name of Commonwealthers and marched to Washington at their head, seems to have had an experience befitting his undertaking. A Washington correspondent says that the late Sir John A. Macdonald, but seems to be in fairly good health. He says he is glad to consult the people of the County to find out whether they want him to resign or not, and that if he finds they do, he will resign.

Mr. Mitchell, who is making his old constituency a convalescing visit, is still with us. He does not talk so much as he did, on the occasion of his last visit, about the magical effect upon the country of the publication of his letter against the late Sir John A. Macdonald, but seems to be in fairly good health. He says he is glad to consult the people of the County to find out whether they want him to resign or not, and that if he finds they do, he will resign.

Governor General's Summer. According to his present programme the Earl of Aberdeen will spend a couple of weeks salmon fishing on the Restigouche, about the first of June. From there His Excellency will proceed to Halifax to visit probably during the month of August. Thereafter His Excellency will be joined by the Countess upon her return from Europe. A four weeks' visit to Quebec will follow, and from the ancient capital it is expected His Excellency will make a trip across the continent, visiting the North-West and British Columbia at the time of year when these sections are to be seen at the best. Upon their return, early in November, their Excellencies will probably go to Montreal for about six weeks.

The Collector's Mistake. The facts of the case as shown by the correspondence and threaded out in the debate appear to be that the Rev. Father Farthing imported some articles for the St. John church at Woodstock and was charged duty on them. He complained of the unfairness of this and the result was that the mistake of the collector was corrected and the duty was refunded.

The Nicholson Estate Case. The Globe of Monday last says: "The hearing of the Nicholson will case will be commenced before Judge Tuck on Wednesday, the 20th day of June. This morning when the case was called a host of barristers were present. Mr. Hanson for the plaintiff and Mr. McLeod for the defendant. The hearing proceeded with the usual formality of a trial. Mr. Hanson opened the case by asking that the hearing be proceeded with. Mr. McLeod, who represented Major Grant, wanted an adjournment for one or two weeks until Mr. Simon Jones, one of the trustees, gets back from England. Nearly an hour was spent in discussing whether or not an adjournment would be had, and one was finally arranged for. Messrs. Hanson and Palmer argued that it was unfair to go on until Mr. Jones got home. They also raised legal objections, first that there had not been sufficient notice given to the defendant, and secondly that Mr. Hanson was not a proper party to the case. Mr. McLeod replied that the notice was sufficient and that Mr. Hanson was a proper party to the case. The judge ruled in favor of Mr. Hanson and the case will proceed on Wednesday.

The Montreal Herald announces that it was in error in stating that Judge Elliott, of London, who has just been appointed, was the same Judge Elliott of London who had achieved some distinction in connection with the late Hyman-Carling case in that city. It adds that "this very respectable mistake and its origin is due to our apology should be as conspicuously published as was widely circulated as the offensive word."

London, May 25.—Mrs. Drew, Mr. Gladstone's daughter, stated last night that even the doctors were surprised at the fortitude and strength of her father, exhibited during the operation of having the stone cut. She said that her father was in a very good state of health and that he was confident that the result will prove satisfactory. The following bulletins in regard to Mr. Gladstone's condition are in the interest of his friends. He has passed a good day, is going on as well as possible.

The American archeologists who went to the recently newly discovered city in the Sierra Madre mountains, have returned to tell of another hidden city five Spanish leagues north of the first city. The leader of the party, C. W. Folger, of Philadelphia, states that these cities were evidently two capitals of a wealthy district long before the Aztec. The two cities are connected by underground passages hewn out of solid rock and it was while exploring one of these passages that the second city was discovered. It lies in a deep basin of the mountains and no exits except the underground passages could be found.

Particulars of the drowning of her two children by Mrs. Charles Jackson, at Upper Economy, Colchester Co., says that on Wednesday forenoon the mother had at home with her a baby, a little boy about 6 years old and a girl year or two younger. She took the children to the well, which had been nailed down, and threw the little boy and girl both in, and left them to drown. She then went to Mrs. Fulton, her nearest neighbor, and told her what she had done. Mrs. Fulton nearly believed her, but on being told the whole and called to some of the nearest neighbors for help, but they arrived only in time to rescue the dead bodies of the children from the well.

Death in a Lion's Jaws before 2000 People. Death in a lion's jaws came near being the finale of Heinrich Mehmman's act last night, says Tuesday's Boston Post. Two thousand pairs of horrified eyes saw him knocked prostrate on the Columbia Theatre stage; two thousand voices rose in hoarse cries of terror as his blood splashed in the sawdust. The lion tamer seemed very near his end.

But two daughters masters of the savage beasts came speedily to his assistance. With blood streaming from many deep and ragged wounds, he staggered from the ring with a smile on his face, as he retreated from the wild and joyful applause of the audience. And the lion crouched, trembling, and snarled at the feet of the victor. Never again, probably, will the Columbia Theatre show such a frightened audience. Had the battle between man and beast been prolonged another minute, a part which would have taken many a life would have occurred. This has been added to the history of Hagenbeck's menagerie the story of another encounter such as the nature of the exhibition renders constantly liable.

Pete, the bear, stood his ears on end last night when the orchestra began to play, and said: "We shall have fun to-night." Pete had every night and every day, for that matter, as, for instance, when he made lunch of the baby leopard three weeks ago. The house was occupied by a large audience. The stage was lit up with gas, the sawdust fresh and new, and the animals in apparently placid humor.

The last act began. Slowly the seventeen beasts of all kinds slouched into the ring and moaned their pedantic, with only a growl or two. Then trainer Mehmman strode into the midst of them, resplendent in shiny boots, dress coat and glittering diamonds. The act was over. The audience was bestirring itself preparatory to go, while the beasts on the stage were filing out to their cages. "Come, Nero," said Mr. Mehmman to the lawyer giant, as he showed no disposition to move. "I decline," muttered Nero with a prolonged yawn. "Now I'll shout the trainer." Nero never budged but crouched low and drew his heavy lips back from his great teeth. Mehmman brought his whip into the air. The house was as still as a sepulchre. The people stopped moving. How came the lash sharply on Nero's yellow hide. The audience saw a flash. Two giant paw flew out and stopped on Mehmman's breast. Down he went like a shot, rolling helplessly in the awed, Nero's foot on his breast while the bars shook from the tremendous yowls that rushed from the lion's cavernous lair.

"Save him!" was the involuntary cry that went up from the audience. "He is dead," shrieked the women, as they dashed into the aisles and raced for the doors. "This is no place for me," soliloquized many a man, as he hastily sought the street. The lion's growls were drowned in the clamor of a thousand feet. Nero's thought it was all up with Mehmman. Mingling with the general shouting were the piercing hurrahs of the Russian hounds, who, true to their duty, had attacked the lion from all sides. But he swept them down with lightning strokes of one paw, while he had fast the trainer with the other. Suddenly a slender youth bounded into the cage. It was Willie Judge, a mere boy, who had lain fourteen weeks in a Chicago hospital after having been attacked by another lion. Behind him came Fritz Mas, another of the keepers. They were armed with double-pronged forks. Nero saw them coming. He pulled his claws with a great reading of the flesh from the trainer's body and turned on his assailants. But there is no fear in Willie Judge, his fiery cheeks had only a little more color as he dashed upon the beast and jabbed the steel in its hide. Mas was up, lion doing valiant duty, while Mehmman, despite the loss of blood, came to his feet in an instant and fiercely assailed the lion. Thrice around the ring, growling and baring his teeth, rushed Nero before the angry keeper, and at last he fled into the farthest corner of his cage. Willie Judge faithfully followed him and removed his collar. Then every man on the stage entered the cage and with the utmost delight administered to Nero a united lashing which will never be forgotten. It is simply the result of sudden impulses. Nero came from Hamburg and has been with the show three years. This is the worst injury that Trainer Mehmman has ever received from his animals, although he has had several encounters. Last Friday he had a difficulty with Yellow Prince, another of the lions. Mehmman is well up, but will be all right unless blood poisoning results, as it is very apt to do. He will appear as usual, however, in order to maintain his usual record on the animals, but the heavy work will be done by his assistants. Notwithstanding the fact that the audience were perfectly protected, many of them left the theatre. After the lion had been vanquished, those who did not go remained cheering and accepting to see further trouble. They did not leave until they were forced to it by the turning out of the lights.
