ROUMANIA COMING IN?

Reports regarding the prospect of Roumania entering the war on the side of the Entente Allies have been repeated so often that now they are not generally believed. When Italy came in, it was pointed out by military experts and newspaper writers all over the world that her racial affinity with, and deep sympathy for, France and Italy were certain to bring her to their side in a very short time. Italy has now been in the war for eight months or more and still Roumania's position has not changed. It is difficult to understand why she longer hesitates, whether her Hohenzollern monarch has succeeded in bringing the government to the view that their country's interest would best be served by maintaining a strict neutrality under all circumstances until the end of the war, or whether the time is not regarded as auspicious for her entry.

Conditions are better for Roumania now than when the former reports were in circulation. Then the Germans had manifested activity on the eastern front and had driven the Slavic remnants of the Czar well back into their own country. Now, however, Russia has gained her "second wind" and is making most satisfactory progress. Especially is this the case in that section of the battle line nearest to the Roumanian border. Conditions elsewhere have so materially improved that it must be patent to the Roumanian authorities that if they are to have the advantage of the men and money of the Allies they must quickly take up the battle against Prussian militarism. That Britain, France, Russia and Italy have the men, the money, the resources and the determination to prosecute this war to a victorious conclusion is now generally recognized, and it would seem that if Roumania intends to come in at all, she must do so within the next few months. The Allies can get along very nicely without her, but after the war she will be a material loser if she has not proved her title to any concessions which may be awarded to those who have assisted in this struggle.

"THE AMERICAN LEGION"

That the sympathy of the great mass of the American people is with Great Britain in this world war is evidenced by the formation in Canada of what is known as the "American Legion," which the Boston Transcript says is "a partial recompense for a similar service to the United States by the Dominion of Canada more than half a century ago." The Transcript continues:

"The part which Canadians played in our Civil War is not as fully and accurately remembered as it should be. There are those who think of nothing but the refuge which was there given to Confederates and the Confederate pilots which there were formed against the Union. These were not pleasant for us to contemplate, but it must be confessed that they were within the limits of neutrality, so that we had no valid reason for complaint or protest.

"The fact is, however, that Canada or Canadians gave us much very practical aid in that war. Nearly 50,000 Canadians entered the Federal army and served loyally and efficiently under the Stars and Stripes. How well they served is testified by the fact that about two-fifths of their number were killed or wounded. It is true that these Canadian levies were not generally recognized, and that they have been so much forgotten that comparatively few Americans now remember that they were in our army at all. That is largely because they did not form regiments of their own, but were incorporated as individuals in our own United States regiments; but that fact makes their devotion to our cause the more noteworthy and admirable. They were not seeking distinction and glory, but simply the preservation of the American Union, and they were willing to do their work in obscurity and unnamed.

"The Americans who have enlisted in the British army in Canada differ from these in that they have formed a regiment of their own, which is known as the American Regiment. It has grown to such numbers that it will presently be recognized as a brigade, and it is not unlikely that a second brigade will before long be formed. It is interesting, too, to observe the composition of this body in its ranks are to be found university graduates, men of large fortunes and men of social distinction, all of whom have become 'boobies' and 'bummers' for sheer devotion to the cause of the Allies against Kultur. "It would doubtless be a breach of neutrality to enlist recruits for that legion in this country. But there is no law forbidding Americans to visit Canada and while there to enroll themselves in the American Legion. To what extent it is legally permissible for citizens of this country to send to that legion contributions to ward its equipment is an interesting question. But doubtless those who, while not able to enlist themselves, would like to feel that they have in some way added to the efficiency or to the comfort and safety of those troops will find a method of doing it which will not involve them in trouble with the Department of Justice. Certainly the career of the legion will be watched with interest by multitudes in this country who have no personal interest in or relationship to any of its members, but who instinctively sympathize with the spirit which led Kosciuszko and Pulaski hither from Poland, and Lafayette and De Kalb and Steuben hither from France, for the last-named, though a German, came from France and under French nationality and his access to important papers, the minister of marine refused to accept." Mr. Heidmann was born in Germany. In his case Mr. Hazen repudiates the theory "once a German always a German." If, however, we all repudiate that theory, is it fair to lead a man into temptation?

THE TIMES AND MR. HEIDMANN.

The Times last evening said:

"Now if Mr. Hazen's German secretary had been a grim member of the secret service, the patriotic press would have pounded the war post and shrieked for slaughter. But as the case stands The Standard discovers a new view of the theory 'once a German always a German.' In that it is typical of the man that when Mr. Heidmann desired to resign because of the rumors that have been passing around regarding his nationality and his access to important papers, the minister of marine refused to accept." Mr. Heidmann was born in Germany. In his case Mr. Hazen repudiates the theory "once a German always a German." If, however, we all repudiate that theory, is it fair to lead a man into temptation?

Let us carry the case referred to the other extreme. Suppose it had been Mr. Pugsley's secretary in the position of Mr. Heidmann. Would not the Times denounce any question of his honesty or loyalty as dirty partisanship undertaken only in the hope of hitting his employer over his shoulder? Mr. Heidmann has been in Canada since he was an infant in arms. He has been thoroughly schooled in Canadian and British liberty, the liberty for which his parents left the fatherland. That he should be at all under suspicion is an absurd reflection upon him as well as on Hon. Mr. Hazen. It is admitted that at this time the first duty of the Canadian authorities is to insure the safety of the people even at the risk of bringing distress upon innocent persons. But have we not good reason to trust to the Government which for eighteen months has handled the situation carefully and with good results.

In the case of the Times and Mr. Heidmann it appears that the secretary must be made to suffer because of that newspaper's hatred for Hon. Mr. Hazen. The Times' treatment of this question will strike most people as rather dirty even for a newspaper that long ago lost all sense of fair play and decency.

The amateur contest at the Opera House last night in connection with the production of The Black Flag by Young-Adams Company, was very entertaining and so evenly were the various contestants the judges were rather at a loss as to how to award the prizes. The first prize went to "Mysterious Billy Smith, a comic singer and acrobatic dancer, who said he hailed from Boston; second to Louis Doherty, the sweet singer from Union street; and the third to a Salome dancer, who especially requested that his real name be kept out of the paper. Salome should have done better, as "her" costumes were gorgeous,—"she" also received an elegant floral tribute from friends in the audience. There were two entries in the Charlie Chaplin contest,—both clever as to make-up and costumes, even to the shoes.

HOW NEUTRAL WAS IMPRESSED BY VISIT TO FRANCE AND LONDON

A distinguished party of Swedish politicians, journalists, and statesmen arrived in London recently. They come entirely in an unofficial capacity, and are inquiring into the state of public feeling in the country and to the efforts we are making both as regards men and munitions.

The party has just spent over ten days in France, where they received a very cordial welcome from Parliamentary Committees and others, and were greatly impressed by the strength of France in a military sense and in the resolute spirit of the people.

The party includes four members of the Swedish Parliament—Baron Adelsvard, late Minister of Commerce of the Second Chamber; Baron Palmsterna, another member of the Second Chamber and an ex-commander of the Swedish navy; Professor Backstrom, member of the First Chamber; and Mr. M. Holberg, who, besides being editor of the "Karlstads Tidningen," is also a member of the First Chamber. The foregoing belong to the committee of the inter-parliamentary group of the Swedish Riksdag. There are three representatives of the Swedish Press in the party—Mr. Alkman, editor of the "Goteborgs Aftonblad," Mr. Rahm, and Mr. von Posten. There are five representatives of the Swedish army, namely—Major Liljeholm, Captain von Ardin, Dr. Erhardt, Dr. Hill, and Count Wachtmeister. Professor Sjogren, of the Swedish State Museum, is also among our visitors.

The visitors were entertained by the Swedish Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night. Yesterday they visited some munition works, and were entertained privately at lunch, one party at the Savoy Hotel and the other at the Hotel de Ville. The well-known Swedish author and journalist, today the party will have an opportunity of visiting other munition works and be shown something of the new armaments. They will remain in this country for some days.

The representatives of Sweden will everywhere receive a very cordial welcome, none the less because they are here in an official capacity but on a mission of inquiry.

Impressions of France.

No neutral visitor who has seen France in this hour of her test and triumph has failed to be moved by her heroic fortitude and endurance. And the party of Swedish politicians and publicists that has just returned from a visit to the French and British fronts is no exception to the rule. "We were overwhelmingly impressed by the unanimous spirit of decision and resolution we found everywhere," said Mr. Holberg, a distinguished member of the party, to a "Daily Chronicle" representative yesterday.

"From the leaders of the French nation to the least French soldier," he continued, "we found the same spirit. 'We must go through with it, through to the end,' was the phrase we most commonly heard on everybody's lips. And General Foch, whom we had the honor to meet, gave us the explanation. 'We do not want our children to have to begin it all over again,' he told us, and we could understand. Every body is quietly sure of the ultimate victory. The French seemed to us to be like a people newly awakened and free after a long nightmare of oppression."

Shell Interrupts Meal

The party got a good glimpse of the actual fighting line. On several occasions they were dangerously close. One day, half an hour before they arrived at a place for dinner, a shell wrecked half the building and one side of their diningroom. And in the course of the meal another shell came, shattered the dishes on the table and killed one and wounded another of the soldiers who accompanied them.

Another day they had a vivid impression of the amazing contrasts that have become commonplace in France. They were standing among the ruins of devastated Arras, when suddenly they heard the low sounds of a piano, and they were expressly surprised to hear the voice of a young girl and women could accommodate themselves to any situation, however terrible. In another district, he related, coal miners were quietly engaged in their normal tasks within a mile of the firing line.

If You Had More Time—

How often have you said that?—and how many more times have you thought it? And you've simply gone on saying and thinking it without making any effort to get more time.

More time is yours for the asking. A good watch will give you more time. It will stop the minute leaks which waste time. That is why millions of watches are made every year. You don't suppose that every level-headed, efficient, successful, business and professional man carries a watch simply because it is a handsome ornament, do you? He carries a watch because it gives him more time.

Men who desire good watches buy them at Sharpe's because we deal only in watches manufactured by the best American and Swiss factories, and sell at prices representing the greatest possible watch value.
