The Daily Tribune.
J. L. STEWART, Editor.
SATURDAY EVENING, NOV. 29, 1873.

Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Blake have clamored loudly and long for vengeance on the murderer of Thomas Scott. When they were in opposition in Ontario they overthrew Sandfield Macdonald's Government with the cry of "Death to Riel." When they obtained power in Ontario they offered a reward for the arrest of the murderer. When in opposition in the Dominion Parliament they consistently clamored for active efforts to be made to find and punish the red-handed outlaw. But now they are in power they cease to sing the old song. For from it. One of the Cabinet Ministers - the Minister of Justice - openly declares that he wishes an amnesty granted to Riel. He would not make so important a declaration as this without having consulted his colleagues, Mackenzie and Blake, and his declaration cannot go unrepudiated without the Cabinet being responsible for it. The Cabinet, therefore, is on record in favor of an amnesty for Riel. We presume that it is only necessary for those who wish to be known by the Queen. We should not be surprised if the Ministers would ask for an amnesty for this Riel, for whose blood they have thirsted so long, on the pretence that it was promised by their predecessors. It would be just like them to profess to discover, in some interested letter or stolen private paper, proof that such a promise was given by the late Government, and then proceed to act on it. We shall see what they shall do.

Northern Pacific bondholders are jubilant over the Pacific Railway policy announced by Mr. Mackenzie, and are confident that the new life to be breathed into that nearly defunct work by the fruits of its Canadian investments will bring their bonds up to par again. The position of the road already built will be made to pay by the connection with Manitoba and British Columbia which our political Government's late given in accordance with a bargain long since made, and then the company will easily procure funds for its extension to the Pacific. Thus do we promote the building of a rival road on which not another blow would be struck. The course for the Irish seepers brought in on that day's shabby scarecrow from the mainland at Blackhead Island when they called Robert Walker, the husband of George's widow, to fill most creditably the questionable post assigned to him in the story, here given in a manner which promises to prove that it is not impeached. It runs through the story of a quarrel and quarrelling and desertion, and at last mere wreck and oblivion. The explanation of the story is that it is like the deaconess of the cheaper kinds of drama, where she causes which produced the trouble in the first place, and the simplest elements just before the curtain falls. Robert was not dead, but very near it. He was on the beach of French's Hotel, and the lugubrious vehicle which carried him away was not a hearse, but a conveyance for the poor, whose name we would avoid in calling it a "hearse." The French's Hotel is a "sailed basket," as took Mr. Walker out to Greenwood.

Nothing more scenic ever happens in France. No tragedy fuller of common sense and terror has ever been written. Yet the Parisians make plays for the rest of the world, and who is there among us who can write a novel to equal to the average half-dozen produced every week in London?

Some worthy people thought we were mistaken, months ago, when we compared the foolish independence of some Grit papers to that of dog sitting at Mr. Mackenzie's feet. "You must be mistaken," they said, "in your estimate of their conduct." These worthy people have changed their minds. They have seen these independent people go up to Ottawa and ask Mr. Mackenzie for his approval for their candidate, they have seen these independent journals silent when the balance of power in the Cabinet is overthrown in the interests of Ontario, and they have then shouting amen to everything Mr. Mackenzie says.

The Freeman doubts the correctness of the charges made against the Government for collusion with the Northern Pacific Railway Directors, and wants proof. We have already given far more proofs than the Freeman had when it announced its belief in Huntington's charges.

The Maritime Monthly, for December, has "Salmon Fishing on the Resignation," "The Life and Work of Thomas Erskine," "Be Still," continuations of the serials, and several well selected articles.

A Ready-Made Novel.
Balzac used to say that the records of the courts and the police never produced a real story with a beginning, middle, and end, and one of the happiest of Leon Godard's sketches is a description of a dinner at which Vidocq refused the great renouncer's statement by giving a most ingenious reminiscence from his own penance of absorbing interest and startling catastrophe. The Sarrogate's Court of New York has for the last few days been affording an additional contradiction to the prejudicial dictum of the author of the "Human Comedy." No play of our time has been so full of all the elements of dramatic interest as the trial on the application of the lady calling herself the widow of George Hardin for letters of administration on his estate.

Hardin was one of those shrewd, finely dressed, industrious men from the north of Ireland who have so many representatives in our high financial and commercial world. He came to this country, and went into business as an importer of Irish linens, making a fortune, which, after retiring from that pursuit, he greatly increased by judicious dealings in commercial paper. He was a man of old acquaintance with a Mrs. Walker about twenty-five years ago, and as a result of his life, he was in a modest house in Cornelia street. For a quarter of a century, more or less, he lived in the same house, and his business acquaintances as a thrifty merchant and speculator under the name of Hardin, and to his neighbors in Cornelia street, a quiet and unpretending citizen who was called George Walker. He prospered as a result of his business dealings, and accumulated a large estate.

But, as it happened, he was married to a woman who was not his equal in business, and she was a woman of a different class. She was a woman of a different class, and she was a woman of a different class. She was a woman of a different class, and she was a woman of a different class. She was a woman of a different class, and she was a woman of a different class.

But the late Saturday took on a different aspect than the previous days. The course for the Irish seepers brought in on that day's shabby scarecrow from the mainland at Blackhead Island when they called Robert Walker, the husband of George's widow, to fill most creditably the questionable post assigned to him in the story, here given in a manner which promises to prove that it is not impeached. It runs through the story of a quarrel and quarrelling and desertion, and at last mere wreck and oblivion.

The citizens of Fairville are arranging a course of lectures for this winter. John Boyd, Esq., will deliver the opening lecture on the 5th proximo. The course last year was very popular. A large drum has been fitted up in the Portland Police Station to beat the bells. This will prevent uproarious drunkards from amusing themselves breaking the roof, as has been their wont.

Rested Out!
We have this week received a number of names from our mailing books. Some were the names of individuals who requested the Weekly Tribune sent to them, promising to remit the money in a few weeks, and others those of subscribers who failed to renew at the expiration of the time for which they had paid. We regret thus to part company with any of our old friends, but THE TRIBUNE must run on the "cash in advance" principle. News subscribers are coming in very freely, and frequently of late, we have not been able to furnish them with copies until the second issue following the date at which their money was received. In the meantime delinquents were receiving THE TRIBUNE. Subscribers must send in their cash for renewals, sharp, else their names will become only a blot on our mailing books.

A Tris Dream.
Dreams are of some use after all, in spite of what skeptics say. This is proved by Mr. W. I. Whiting, who dreamed that his house at Bothesay had been robbed. The dream so impressed him that he went out to the house and sure enough he found it had been entered and robbed of a large quantity of furniture and clothing. He didn't dream where the stuff was concealed, but had to depend on one of those charged with their duty to find the articles stolen. He waked up before he had time to finish the dream, or no doubt the whole of it, the circumstances would have been revealed to him.

The Skating Rink.
The operation of making ice in the Skating Rink has commenced, and if this cold weather continues, the most popular place in St. John will be open to amusement seekers a week or two, which affords a pleasant change to the city of Portland, last evening. The M. registers 87 tons, was built at St. George, N. B., in 1866, and is owned by Mr. Samuel Johnston of Magaguadavic.

The Nations and their New Beliefs.
The news published yesterday in our second edition, concerning the political changes in Europe, continues to be the topic of much speculation and comment. Some surprise is expressed that Knight Laurier was not designated to Arragon, in consideration of his former close affiliation to the Spanish Court, as Don Cesar de Bazan; but a moment's reflection will convince that the reckless Don, in the present grave situation of Spanish affairs, would hardly be a proper appointment for the post. From various rumors current we collate such statements as seem most probable and trustworthy. It is said that a dispatch was received this morning at the organ factory from a Committee of the Right Centre at Versailles, enquiring Knight Kennay's views relative to the funding of the French war debt, and copies of the following congratulatory telegram from the inhabitants of Provence are exhibited upon the streets:

Maison de Preterit.

Point Lepreau Weather and Marine Report.
The following is the telegraphic report from Point Lepreau to the Board of Trade, yesterday afternoon:
4 p. m.—Wind N. W., strong breeze, clear. One schooner out, one out gone into Dipper harbor. Three schooners in port.
The following is this morning's report:
9 a. m.—Wind N. W., high, with light cloud. Nothing in sight. Thermometer 13.
An Irate Whitewasher.
A whitewasher named Irvine appeared this morning and presented a bill to the Police Magistrate, for whitewashing the Lower Cove Police Station. It was a very modest bill indeed, only $22, for doing the job, and it was presented with due humility on Irvine's part. The Magistrate, on looking at it, got indignant at once, and ordered the man away from the court room. Such a deliberate attempt to swindle he could not stand, and charged all concerned never again to hire the whitewasher to do any work. The man, with his bill unpaid, and pouring out his wrath against the venerable Magistrate.

Shipping Notes.
Quebec, Nov. 26.—The present situation of vessels caught in the late storm is as follows:—The brig Proteus (Br.), from Montreal for Falmouth, wrecked at Cape Liable, has been condemned, and her sale is recommended.
The ship St. Arden (Br.), from Quebec for Liverpool, is still ashore near Ramoth rask.
The bark Wolf's Cove is in a safe place near St. Rocks.
The bark Marchessault (Br.), from Quebec for Hull, ashore at the River Dulooch is considered safe.
The ship Amour has put into winter quarters at Murray Bay.
The brig America and the steamer Margaret Stevenson are wintered at Bic.
The crew of the wrecked brig "Proteus" (probably Proteus) have arrived here. They will be forwarded to Portland en route for England.
The bark Tanager, Cringle, master, from Painescola for Liverpool, was abandoned at sea on the 19th inst., waterlogged. All hands were saved and reached Brunswick, Ga., 25th, in schooner Agnes, Capt. Hodgdon. The T. registered 968 tons, was built at Bathurst, N. B., in 1861, and owned in Liverpool.
The schooner Nellie J. Dinmore, from Windsor, N. S., for Alexandria, was aground on the 26th inst., on the flats near Fort Hood, Potomac River.
The Gulf steamer Pithon has not yet been heard from, nor the Albatross which was sent in search of her.
The bark Oler, Rich, master, from Pictou, N. S., for Portland, with coal, was driven ashore on Madam Island during the gale of the 25th inst. The vessel is a total wreck. The crew barely escaped with their lives after being on the wreck 12 hours.
The brigantine Magaguadavic, Johnson, master, from Sydney, C. B., for this port, with coal, went ashore at Grand Mann during the storm on the 24th inst. The vessel is a total wreck. The captain and crew were saved and arrived here by the City of Portland, last evening. The M. registers 87 tons, was built at St. George, N. B., in 1866, and is owned by Mr. Samuel Johnston of Magaguadavic.

A Rowdy Scene in the Last.
One of the most disgraceful scenes ever witnessed in the city took place at the Mechanics Institute last evening. Trust J. Henschel Smith and lady appeared under the auspices of a committee of enterprising young men, who were anxious to hear and give many others in the city a chance to enjoy the intellectual treat furnished by this happy couple. If such a row had been made at a picnic by a crowd of roughs, it would be called rowdiness, but, commenced and carried on by young and old men of good social position, it is called a gentlemanly disturbance. It fully came up to a closing scene in the House of Assembly at Fredericton. Those who took the least should be thoroughly ashamed of themselves, and the committee should spare no pains to have any who are known punished. It is not likely, however, that any will be punished for the wanton destruction of property and disturbing a public meeting, as they are all of "good families." How very wrong it would be to bring up the names of aristocratic families, bank clerks and others, and have their names paraded in the newspapers in connection with a police court inquiry. The community could not stand it. The commencement was amusing, but what commenced in fun ended in perfect riot, and it is well that no serious injury was done to any one. Hat smashing was fully equal to any ever seen at a railway demonstration, and no one was spared. Two kind of mischief that could be found. Shoes, putty, cushions, chairs, stones, or anything that could be moved, were fired across the house, and, until the constables retired by the back door and the gas was turned off, there was no cessation of the disturbance. The damage done to the building and furniture was serious. A large number of chairs were destroyed, the organ was damaged, cushions were ripped open and maliciously cut, the gasaliers were broken, some of the burners being knocked out. It is only wonderful that some of them were not torn down and the building set on fire. The police were there in force, and were considered excellent targets by the crowd, who pelled them even worse than they did the M. P's. No attempt was made to arrest any one. "It was useless to arrest any one in such a crowd," said the police. Fudge: one person arrested and taken from the hall by the police would have quieted the disturbance. Instead of that the police, from the Chief down, stood like helpless idiots, and did not turn down and the building set on fire. The police were there in force, and were considered excellent targets by the crowd, who pelled them even worse than they did the M. P's. No attempt was made to arrest any one.
