The Gown and the Surplice.

"The Gown has always been the usual dress in the Pulpit, and any Bishop attempting to enforce the use of the Surplice would find himself unsupported by the Law of the Church. The attempt made to identify the Surplice with the doctrine of a sacrificing priesthood has naturally, and justly, made the people jealous of any extension of its use."—Rev. W. Goode, D. D., (late Dean of Ripon.)

"I have worn my M. A. gown in the pulpit more than sixty-four years, and never in my life saw but one clergyman preaching in a Surplice, and that not from choice but from sheer necessity."—Rev. B. Richings, author of 'A Defence of the Gown and the Pulpit.'

"There are that abhor to appear as Ministers of the Church of England by wearing any black gown."—Bishop of Worcester (1659.)

To the Editor of the Tribune.

The universal practice is further proved, and conclusively, by the prevailing custom in English Cathedrals. This branch of the argument is well stated by Archdeacon Harrison:—

"Though provision was made, that preaching in Cathedrals should be constant, yet it was allowed that, in case of sickness, or lawful absence, the deans, prebendaries, &c., shall substitute such licensed preachers to supply their turns as by the Bishop of the Diocese shall be thought meet to preach in Cathedral Churches; and in such cases, I think it quite certain, from the evidence of traditionary custom in all Cathedrals, that the sermon would be preached, not in the Surplice, but always in the Gown. Thus, it was not the usage of the Cathedral, as the pattern of correct practice that ruled the point, but rather the status of the individual in regard to the Cathedral. Not only would it not be required that the preacher in the Cathedral, not being a member of the Cathedral Body, should wear the Surplice,—which would surely be the case if it rested on considerations of ecclesiastical propriety; it would not even be permitted him to wear in preaching this distinctive badge of a member of the Cathedral. There is not, I believe, a single Cathedral in England or Ireland, in which the Preacher, not being a member of the Cathedral Body, would be allowed to preach in the Surplice, even though it were the sermon in the morning or communion service."

Probably the statement of the Archdeacon may require some qualification today. Puseyism has circulated its corrupting influences, and gained an admission for Popish practices, since he wrote (1840.) We see in, alas, too many quarters ceremonials introduced and vestments permitted, which the temporizing temper of the times winks at, and where a few years ago they would have been prohibited with the stern spirit of the heroes of the Reformation. Thus steadily and surely, the virus of Puseyism is attacking and paralyzing, where once the Scriptural purity and power of the Reformation held strongholds; and men who profess themselves antagonists of the Puseyistical system of un-protestantizing the Episcopal Church, are doing Dr. Pusey's bidding nevertheless, and "ousting" the "preaching and practice of the Primitive Church" in favor of the cunningly devised innovations and errors of Dr. Pusey himself; who thus is "deceiving the very elect," and transforming the liturgy of the Church of England page by page into the missal of the Church of Rome.

In 1662 the present Ornaments Rubric in the prayer book was enacted, and, as I have frequently stated, it provided that such ornaments shall be retained as were in use by authority of Parliament in the second year of the reign of Edward VII. You will remember that this refers to the first book, and that book authorized or prescribed the use of Cope, Tunicle, etc., as proper garbs at the Communion Service. I need not here reiterate the contention of the Rev. Mr. Purchas, or again say anything of the decision of the highest court of competent jurisdiction as to that contention. It is wonderful, however, to notice what strangely erroneous ideas have been successfully circulated under the thin pretence that they are logically predicated upon the Purchas judgment. The general diffusion of correct information on that point, I am happy to say, has changed the opinions of many, hastily formed after a superficial perusal of that judgment, and has enabled them confidently and successfully to confute those who misinterpret it on the one hand, or on the other talk ignorantly about it, not having really read it.

Cripps, in addition to the extracts I have already given from his learned works, and in which he declared that it "never appears to have been ever contemplated either by common statute law" to wear the Surplice in the pulpit, says:

"The error may possibly have arisen from the custom of the deans, &c., in Cathedrals or Colleges to wear their Surplices while preaching in their own Cathedral or College, but these they wear on such occasions not as Preachers or as persons ministering, but because it is the ordinary dress which they are directed to wear, and which they do always wear, when they attend their Cathedral or College church or chapel, whether ministering or members of the congregation only, and which Surplices even Fellows of the Colleges ordinarily wear when attending service at their College chapels." Others have supposed this error to have arisen from the circumstance that the morning sermon is thought to be a part of the Order of the Administration of the Lord's Supper, which however involves manifest absurdity. The sermon is not preached in the same place where the Lord's Supper is administered, and there is therefore no argument that it shall be in the same habit.

A learned Prelate of our Church very cogently sums up the argument in an address to his clergy:

"The true state of the case I take to be, that you are directed to use the Surplice only when reading Divine Service or administering the Sacraments; you then appear in your proper character of a priest or deacon appointed to minister in holy things; but when you preach you assume the character of a teacher, and as such your proper habit is your academical gown with a hood distinguishing your degree at the University."

Do not reason, and the sound deductions from the teaching of our Lord, plainly point out, even if there were a total absence of high Church authority and plain injunctions, as well as the "contemporaneous exposition" of three centuries of history, and the undoubted "teaching and practice of the primitive Church," on the subject there is something seemly, proper and consistent in making a marked distinction between the dress worn by the Minister when he says the prayers and ministers the sacraments of the Church, and the dress worn by the preacher when he stands in the pulpit and reads his own compositions, which, however faithful and honest are yet but the mere words of the human understanding? True, they who contend that they are "sacrificing Priests" ministering at an "Altar" and offer up a sacrifice supplementary to the one sufficient and perfect Sacrifice of our Holy Redeemer, "once for all," on the Cross; who urge that they are lineal descendants of the immediate Apostles of our Lord, and that everytime they consecrate the sacramental bread or pronounce the words Hoc est corpus meum they do more than could the Apostles and transform the elements into the actual, objective and real body and blood of the Great Sacrifice; who claim that they may "bind and loose" on Earth and in Heaven with a power co-equal with that of their Divine Master, and contend that every word they speak is as infallible as the language of "holy men of old who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost;"—they all may dissent from my arguments, and revel in dogmas repugnant to the Word of God and the teaching of the Church,—but for all that the argument will remain irrefutable because it is strictly Scriptural.

NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Miss Hannah Drury has bought a 2,200 acre plantation in North Carolina.

New York ladies are wearing vests—real masculine waistcoats—to be more explicit. They are made of bright colored silk or satin and are intended for evening wear. All kinds of trimming can be used.

The numbers of The Living Age for the weeks ending March 14 and 21 have the following noteworthy contents:—Henry Thoreau, the Poet-Naturalist; The French Press, part III; Mendelssohn, part II.; a Christmas in India; The Acoustic Transparency and Opacity of the Atmosphere; A Gold Coast Tragedy; Recollections of Visits to Ashistiel and Abbotsford; Winkelmann; Three days in Sark; The Philosopher's Baby; Gladstone's Ministry; Mr. Gladstone as a Force; the Two Speransky, a page of Russian Official Life, and parts II and III of the Story of Valentine and his Brother; besides poetry and miscellany.

GENERAL.

The new necklace is made of blocks of Roman gold, four inches square, fastened by chains of fine gold. They are unique, but rather overwhelming.

Masculine coats are to be worn by the ladies next summer. They are the invention of Pingat, the only acknowledged rival of Worth in the French capital.

The trustees of the London Peabody fund report the total on the 31st of December last to have been £578,059. The number of families now in residence at the trustees buildings is 882, occupying 1,875 rooms. The average rent per room is 1s. 10d. per week, and the average weekly earnings of the head of each family is about £1 3s. 1d. Two more blocks for the accommodation of 44 families have been built on the Blackfriar's road Estate, which will shortly be opened; while 16 blocks for 352 families are in course of erection on the site near Stamford street. The net income derived from the buildings is about 2½ per cent. per annum upon the outlay.

The Durham, Eng., coal-field owners have reduced the price of house coal three and four shillings a ton, and manufacturing coal and coke are also lower. North of England advices the last of February mentioned a general derangement of prices, indicating a further general fall, both in the iron and coal trades, and the trade of South Wales showed greater depression, instead of the long expected improvement. The Birmingham coal and iron markets were very much unsettled. It was said that the "demand on the United States account is somewhat steadier, but the business done with that market this quarter will be considerably under the average."

Victor Hugo has published "Ninety-three" at his own expense. The French publisher who paid $80,000 for "The Man Who Laughs," and did not make money by the bargain, has discouraged others from imitating his magnificent example. After a vast amount of haggling with Michael Levy, Hugo got him to take his book for ten per cent., agreeing to pay all cost. His profits in France alone cannot fall short of 300,000 francs. A Paris letter says that Hugo rarely makes use of the pen. He works with the brain and not with the hand. When composing his works he paces the floor of his room, holding high his Olympian head, and snifling the air like Job's charger, dictating to a secretary sitting at a desk in one corner. He dictates very slowly, sentence by sentence, as Moses, to whom the poet often compares himself, must have dictated the words engraved upon the ancient tablets of stone.
