HOW SHALL THEY ANSWER.

A number of young subscribers have written asking whether they shall send the answers to each set of questions as soon as they find them or whether they should keep them all until the end of the year, and then send them together.

As the answers cannot be examined until the end of the year they may take whichever plan they find the most convenient, but we would strongly advise them to find the auswers to each set as soon as possible and send them in at once, as by so doing there will be much less temptation to neglect any of them or to put the search off to 'a more convenient season.'

TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

Alongside of all

"We have not the smallestdoubt that ifthe teetotalism that exists, there is an appalling amount of workingmen were to take a moderate quantity of alcohol in a highly diluted tippling that does not distinctly intoxicate, but saturates form, such as genuine lager beer, about the principal organs, three times a day, and destroys them they would be very more quickly than would an occasional debauch."- London much healthier, able to do more work, Lancet, Dec., 1884. and able to live on a somewhat smaller quantity of more costly food."-American Literary Churchman.

The London Lancet is, probably, the leading medical journal of the world.

The American Literary Churchman isthe American Literary Churchman. That is all we know about it.-The Voice.

A Boston lady teacher has the best proverb exercise we liave seen. The pupils learn many proverbs and recite them. Several are given by the teacher, they forage for many others. One pupil is told to think of some proverb, to think about it carefully, to think of an application. He then tells a story illustrative of the proverb, and the first classmate who guesses the proverb takes his turn. It is one of the most suggestive story-telling schemes yet devised. It approaches the story from a new standpoint; it holds the attention of the class in a new way ; it pays a new premium upon skill in story-telling.

A HINT TO OUR WORKERS.

Among the many answers coming in to our Prize Bible Questions one young girl writes

"Having seen the new Prize Bible Questions in last week's Northern Messenger, which paper we like very much, we wished to try and answer them. We have only been able to answer three out of the five but thought we would send them and try to do better next time."

This is just the right spirit in which to go to work. Do not hesitate to send a few answers because you cannot find the whole set, any more than at your school examinations you would refuse to give in your paper unless you were sure of its being perfect. In this same spirit too would the Messenger have you work in the general Prize Comtition detailed elsewhere on this page. Remember if each present subscriber to the Northern Messenger secures one new one that the circulation will, before the close of this year, amount to NINETY THOUSAND. And in your working be assured of this that the greater number of people you succeed in sending it to the better paper you will have to send. Send us a postal card when you need more sample copies and blank forms and we will send them on JOHN DOUGALL & SON, at once.
