Journalists go to court over I.D.

TORONTO (CUP) — Two Ontario student journalists will go to court Wednesday to face charges of obtaining an age of majority card through illegal means.

Janice Bell and Cathy Perry, Editor and News Editor of the Oblique Times at Seneca College were told by police last December that they would face the charge after obtaining the cards illegally for a story exposing poor controls on the cards. Age of majority cards show the bearer to be at least 19, and are the only legal form of identification a person can use to be served liquor.

Perry (18) obtained the card using Bell's name. However she kept the card for only two hours before returning it to Liquor Licensing Board of Ontario (LLBO) officials. A story about the incident appeared in the Dec. 7 issue of the paper.

Although the pair knew in December of the government's intent to take them to court, they were not actually given a summons until Feb. 5, Bell said.

The pair will enter in a plea of not guilty, Bell said.

B. C. College voted to stay in NUS

NEW WESTMINSTER, BC (CUP) — Douglas College students here have reaffirmed their membership in the BC Students Federation (BCSF) and the National Union of Students (NUS) by a three to one margin.

In a three day referendum which ended Feb. 1, students voted 359 in favor of BCSF and 146 against. They voted 341 in favor of NUS with 168 votes against.

BCSF chair Jean Bennet said the vote gives extra credibility to the organization when dealing with the provincial government.

BCSF staff member John Doherty said, "students see the need for a provincial organization, particularly in terms of fighting cutbacks."

NUS fieldworker Jeff Parr said the vote will help the national organization in the upcoming referendum at the University of Alberta.

The vote means BCSF will not face financial disaster this year and will help in recruiting other campuses to join, Doherty said. Voter turnout was 10% of the college population.

Students sue Calif. Educational System

LOS ANGELES (ZNS-CUP) — Eight black college athletes—what is expected to be a precedent-setting case—have filed a multi-million dollar suit against the California state University system alleging they did not receive the education that was promised them.

The athletes, who attended California State University at Los Angeles during the early 1970s, allege they were lured into the university's athletic program on the promises of being fully educated and awarded college degrees.

One of the eight, basketball player Dwight Slaughter, claims he was promised tutors, counselors and a complete educational package leading to a four-year degree in criminology.

Slaughter tells Pacific News Service that, instead, he and other athletes were encouraged by their coaches and advisors to take such "toughies" as beginning baseball, badminton, rugby, golf, backpacking and water polo.

When his four years of college eligibility were exhausted, Slaughter says, he was denied a degree. He and the others are suing for loss of education.

B of G Med cellar cleaned up

The basement of the Medical Sciences Building will be renovated as a result of action taken by the Board of Governors February 2.

A recommendation from the board's building committee for the conversion of undeveloped space in the basement into animal holding space was approved by the board.

The total estimated cost of the project is $179,000.

The board noted that the project would create ten additional animal rooms for the immediate use of the university's department of immunology. The rooms will be of a modular multi-purpose design to allow a maximum of flexibility over the years.

The department of immunology recently received a five-year, $2.5 million grant from the Medical Research Council of Canada and requires the additional rooms to carry out proposed research on inbred mice.

It is expected that the project will get underway later this month and be completed in June, 1979.
