Ryerson may shut down station

Ryerson Polytechnical Institute's administration has agreed to negotiate after threatening to close down the student-run Ryerson Community Radio station by Monday when the student executive refused to allow unapproved broadcasts and editorials by first year students.

The RCR has accused the RTA administration of breaking a mutual agreement on station programming. The administration in turn charges the station executive with censorship of student broadcasts and discrimination against first year students. The station denies first year discrimination and student union president Mike Walton says the administration wants the station space to carry out its program. According to RCR news director John Yoannou, formerly news director at Radio York, teachers had encouraged their students to violate station policy in utilizing the facilities for labs. Yoannou said, "the problem is the aims of the RTA program and the RCR cannot be consistent with one another. Those first year kids expected to get away with rip and read (from broadcast news teletype). I assigned them to practical reporting stories. RCR provides a next to professional situation and is a valid learning experience." Walton said, "the dispute is a philosophical one. The station is a community one and it's popular. I hope this committee can iron out the problem." He said the union supports the station.

Anti-paper council leaders lose at UofA

EDMONTON (CUP) — The staff of the University of Alberta's student paper The Gateway has won a minor victory in their struggle for control of their paper with the election of a council executive slate opposed to the recent council hiring of a non-staff elected editor. Defeated by a considerable margin in the student elections were David Biltek and Doug Black, present executive members of the U of A Council and leading protagonists in the council move to hire an editor against the recommendation of the Gateway staff. The staff had voted overwhelmingly to support Ron Yakimchuk the present lay-out editor, as editor-in-chief for the next year.

Glendon committees get parity

Glendon's faculty council approved 63 to 50 on Thursday a student motion to create student faculty parity on all the council's committees.

It calls for immediate parity on the nominations committee and instructs that committee to reorganize all other council committees to make provision for parity by September on a two year trial period.

Debate on the motion went on for three weeks and two special council meetings. Discussion revolved around students' capability to make responsible decisions on academic policy.

Although there is only token student representation on the council as a whole, much of its work is done in committees. These include academic standards, policy and planning, curriculum and tenure and promotion committees. The Glendon council is a sub-committee of the York senate, but the senate simply rubber stamps decisions made at the Glendon campus.

The new motion does not contravene the York senate stipulation that a university governing body contain a maximum of 15 percent student representation. Still, some sources predict that the motion will meet opposition when it comes for ratification in senate.

The Glendon vote revealed a faculty split on the question of parity. Opposition was lead mainly by faculty in the economics department who defended "greater faculty expertise" in making academic decisions. They predicted that parity would result in a rash of ill-advised regulations, especially in the areas of tenure and promotion and academic standards.

Students and many members of the faculty rejected this argument. Many faculty welcomed the new approaches to education which parity might provide.

Staff meeting Friday for selection of editor

APOLOGY

The editor wishes to apologize to York's Black People's Movement for running a cartoon depicting two black children with the cutline "When I grow up, I'm gonna be white" with the letter from Patrick Hunter.

The letter charged that the York play WASPS was racist and the cartoon was placed by the editor to draw attention to effects of white capitalism and white-dominated education on black children.

Members of York's Black People's Movement have charged Excalibur with racism for publishing the cartoon but the editor wishes to clearly point out that this was not Excalibur's intention.

ERRATUM

The headline "a dying university" on last week's Page 9 article on York's presidency was meant for the Page 3 article on university tenure. This was an error by our printers and we regret any embarrassment we caused.
