I wonder if I may suggest that if North York gives you the banquet which I see mentioned it (as your first public appearance as leader) would be well if representative Unionist friends were urged to attend. They will hesitate to "break the ice" but if at that banquet the reproachment is not evidenced it will be a pity. Mrs. McKinnon and I want you to stop with us when you come to the city - although if other than personal considerations must not be taken into account by you we will be disappointed but will understand. With best wishes and kindest refers your sincerely

My dear King:

I am sure none of your friends feel greater pleasure about your election than those who live on the hill here. We (Mrs. A. and I) could not sit down to dinner until the final result was telephoned up from the telegraph office.
There was rejoicing when it
