

The view at the commencement of this sketch is a reproduction of an old print of Richmond Street, showing the north-east corner of Dundas Street, as it appeared in 1864 prior to the erection of the Federal Bank building. The site was at that time occupied by Rowland's grocery store. The verandah projecting over the sidewalk on the south-east corner somewhat obscures the view of Dundas Street.