

to Edmonton it is very pretty, but mostly flat, with forests, farms, &c. The flowers all along have been beautiful, the golden marguerite-daisy is thick here. At Wetaskewin we stayed some time. In the fields near by and all around the place the Indians were having a picnic. There was the Chief, all painted up, with his tunic and blanket and all around him. There were Indians galloping along on horseback, all painted in such gay colours; women with their babies rolled on their backs, hundreds of them, all different."

THE SALE OF WORK AT KENSINGTON TOWN HALL.

THE combined sale for Missions, which included stalls for Qu'Appelle, New Westminster, and Moosonee, as well as for Madagascar, North China, Africa, Japan and India, took place in the Kensington Town Hall, on November 6th and 7th, and though the weather was unfavourable it was well attended. The lectures on various parts of the Mission Field with the aid of a magic lantern were extremely popular. Many of us remember the crowded audiences which the Rev. F. Baker used to collect in the north-west, when he exhibited scenes from the old country with his magic lantern, so it is not surprising that when at Kensington he gave a lantern lecture on the diocese of Qu'Appelle every seat was filled. Miss Newnham described the scenes of her brother's Diocese at Moosonee, and one of his coadjutors added a brief account of his personal experiences on the shores of Hudson's Bay, and in the lonely stations of Churchill and Cumberland Fort. The Hon. Lady Montgomery Moore, Lady Shippard, Mrs. Wasbrough, and other ladies who assisted them were indefatigable in their exertions to make the Qu'Appelle Stall a success, and the Dowager Countess of Kingston being unable to be present sent a very handsome contribution. Lady Manners also displayed a most practical interest in it. Madagascar was represented by names closely connected with the present Bishop, and with other long known workers in that fruitful field. The Ven. Archdeacon Small gave the lantern lecture on New Westminster, and Miss Hobson and Miss Spark presided at its stall. Perhaps it was hardly to be expected that India, which has been so long with us, should be as popular as North China and South Africa. Certainly the two last seemed the chief favourites with those of the public who were not interested in any special mission. Lord Ashcombe opened the sale on the first day with a very encouraging speech to workers in the Mission Field, and the Hon. Secretary, Miss G. F. Martin, well deserved a very hearty vote of thanks. Mrs. Laurence and Miss Spencer-Phillips held the stall for the S.P.G. and Cambridge Mission to Delhi, Miss Trotter the flower stall, and Mrs. Shuttleworth and Mrs. Hay provided the refreshments. Lebombo's needs were cared for by Mrs. Malton and Miss Williams, Central Africa by Miss Herring and Mrs. Bickley
