LL. D., F. R. S. When Bishop Geddes reached London, on his way home, he found that he must remain there some time in order to see friends and prepare a Chinese grammar for presentation to Mr. Dundas. In a few days it was complete; and the bishop had a preface ready. Before it was presented Sir George Staunton, Secretary to the Embassy in tended for Pekin, called in company with two missionaries from the Chinese college at Naples. In course of conversation he expressed his regret that there was no grammar of the Chinese language. The bishop showed him the one which he had prepared. He took it with him and promised to present it to Mr. Dundas.

to Mr. Dundas.

Bishop Hay was desirous that the coadjutor before leaving London should see Mr. Dundas regarding the mission affairs of Glasgow. Some of the principal manufacturers were willing to raise a subscription towards building a church for the Catholic people. The shurch for the Catholic people. The shurch for the Catholic people. The Roman Catholics in Scotland. The Bill was read a first time, April 25th, and its of them to accuse those worthy gentle men of infringing the law. Several Protestants were inclined, but for those laws, to aid in the erection of the proposed church. There occurred, meanwhile, a circumstance which proved more powerful than all the diplomacy and elegence of Rishon Geddes. It and elequence of Bishop Geddes. It exposed before a more enlightened pub-lic the odiousness of the penal laws The next Protestant heir to Mr. Max-The next Protestant heir to Mr. Maxwell, of Munshes, had taken measures for possessing himself of Mr. Maxwell's Annandale estate, and would, no doubt, have made good his claim but for the agitation which his proceeding occasioned among the Catholics and their friends. Bishop Hay remarked on this process. outrage: "It will make a curious appearance in the eyes of the world if, whilst Catholics are getting every indulgence they can reasonably desire throughout the whole British Dominions, Munshes should be deprived of such an estate merely because he is a Catholic. How ever God Almighty has His own ends in view; we must refer all to His Divine Providence, who knows how to bring good out of evil. I hope Munshes' affair will in the hands of Providence produce some good. Fiat! Fiat!" The magistrates of Dundee had lately made an offer to Mr. Pepper, the priest in charge there, to petition Government for the extension of the Euglish Relief Bill to Scotland. This proposal, viewed in connection with the friendly action of connection with the friendly settion of the citizens of Glasgow, suggested to the bishop a plan for obtaining the much-desired relief. It was that the four leading towns in Scotland, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen and Dundee should make a united effort in support of the good purpose. "Who knows" added good purpose. "Who knows," added the bishop, "but Providence intends that those very places, which were lately added very much sgainst us, should be the means of befriending us? A bold stroke may be made, and sometimes succeeds best." The agent for the best." The agent for the crown in Edinburgh suggested to Bishop Geddes that when the Irish Relief Bill should pass, the Catholics of Scotland would do very well to bring their claims under the notice of Parliament. There was some difference of opinion as to the expension of the control of the co tent of what should be asked for. Bishop Hay inclined for a general repeal of disabilities rather than of those only which affected the power of Catho lies to hold property. His views were expressed at some length, in a letter to the coadjutor. He considered the time expressed at some length, in a letter to the coadjutor. He considered the time exceedingly favorable, and continuing said: "If Mr. Constable gets any motion made for securing our property would it not be proper for you to write to Lord Gower before it come in, to see if he could get any of his friends to move for the extension of the English Bill to Scottand? We meet with many congratu lations; but none seems to be more glad lot one, and assured me the few exceptions had been left merely for minded. We meet with many congratu lations; but none seems to be more glad lot one. To BE CONTINUED.

To BE CONTINUED. land? Could you not suggest it, also, to Mr. Secretary Dundas? . . . The general run of the country is in our favor, and I do not think that your using your tants). Mr. Maxwell, of Munshes, is returned home in very good spirits, and influence with your great friends could do any harm. If matters were carried through at once there could not be the through at once there could not be the least danger; but if property alone were sought and obtained they might raise a splutter (if they were inclined to make one) to prevent our getting more, of which property would be considered as a prelude. This was the rock our friend applit prop when the first application and split upon when the first application was Had Scotland been inclined in conviction that the most complete relief should be asked for. He addressed, conviction that the most complete relief should be asked for. He addressed, moreover, a circular letter to the Catholic proprietors, inviting their co-operation with Munshes, and proposing, as the most expeditious and economical plan, the simple extension of the English Bills of Relief to Scotland. "We cannot expect, nor would I desire more; and if we got it, it would make us very easy." Mr. Menzies, of Pitfodels, was associated with Munshes and Mr. Constable in bringing the matter before Parliament. The Lord the matter before Parliament. The Lord Advocate, on April 22nd, moved for leave to bring in a Bill to relieve the Scotch Roman Catholics from certain penalties and disabilities imposed on them by former acts of the Scotch Parliament, and especially in the eighth and ninth see sions of the first Parliament of King Wil-The preamble of the Bill asserted imposed on the Roman Catholics of Scotland amounted only to a renunciation of speculative and dogmatic opinions. It was, therefore, enacted that, from this date, the Scotch Roman Catholics who should take and subscribe the oath of abjuration and the declaration annexed to the Bill should be exempted from all the pains, pensities and disabilities imposed, enacted, revived, ratified and confirmed by the said act of the eighth and night sessions of the first Parliament of King William III., as faily and effectually as if such persons had actually made the renunciation of Popery thereby ordained, according to the formula thereunto subimposed on the Roman Catholics of Scot- tude for the interest which he had kindly joined. A certain amount of legal shuf-fling and quibling was but a small price to pay for so important a measure of justice to the Catholics of Scotland. The formula was declared to have been the Catholics themselves had hoped for. The Oath subjoined was the same as that prescribed by the last English Relief Act, and was one against which no scruple could exist. By taking it a Catholic was fully enabled to acquire, possess and dispose of his real and personal estate in Scotland, as any other subject could. An exception, however, was retained which forbade any Catholic, even after taking the oath, from dis-charging the office of a governor, peda-gogue, teacher, tutor or curator, chamber-lain or factor, to any child or children of illegal all donations to religious societies. But these odious parts were cut out by the present and late chancellors. There was not the least direct opposition made to us in either House of Parliament; but,

Protestant parents; neither could be be employed in their education or in the trust and management of their affairs.
The Bill prohibited a Catholic from being a schoolmaster, professor or public tescher of any science in Scotland. Nottescher of any science in Scotland. Notwithstanding these drawbacks the Bill was thankfully received by the Catholic body; Bishop Hay's only disparaging remark being that the exception about teaching was rather inconvenient. The Bill passed the Upper House on May 24th, and received the royal assent on June 3rd. Bishop Geddes, in communicating this good news to Bishop Hay, sincerely congratulated him upon it and expressed his hope that the bishop might live many years to see the good effects resulting from this favor of Providence.
He writes, also, some very interesting particulars illustrative of the history of the Bill: "The first sketch of the Bill which was concerted in Scotland would which was concerted in Scotland would have excluded converts from all benefit of the Act, and had a clause declaring to us in either House of Parliament; but, it is suspected that Colonel McLeod and the Duke of Norlolk, by proposing to give up more privileges, intended to create delays, and even, perhaps, to raise discontent in Scotland. It seems Lord George Gordon also bestirred himself; but there has scarcely been a murmur that I have heard, which, I believe, owing pressly to the quiet manner in which the greatly to the quiet manner in which the affair has been gone about and the very obliging disposition of the publishers of our newspapers who unanimously sgreed to reject every inflammatory composition that was offered them for publication. There was no mention made of us in the general assembly. Its Medgerator, Dr. general assembly. Its Moderator, Dr. Hardie, had seen the Bill at London and had said that it was not favorable enough > tants). Mr. Maxwell, of Munshes, is re turned home in very good spirits, and has brought another emigrant priest has brought another emigrant priest along with him. He and Mr. Constable have paid the expenses in the first instance and will not. I believe, be very rigorous in exacting repayment; but Mr. Menzies, of Pittodels, from whom I heard yesterday from Tunbridge Wells, is strongly of opinion that all proprietors should contribute proportionally and has written to that purpose to Kirkconnell You will, I am persuaded, think his proposal reasonable; and the sum is, I made. Had Scotland been inclined in the first Bill there probably would have been no disturbance. And, from the experience of what happened then, I am fully persuaded that it would be much easier to get the whole at once, just now, than to get a part now and the rest herefiter. Might you not, at least, suggest these reflections to Mr. Constable, as well as to your other friends?"

In a second letter on the subject the bishop earnestly urged on his coadjutor the propriety of communicating with his proposal reasonable; and the sum is, I believe, very moderate. Lord Kelly was the mover in the House of Lords, and expressed great satisfaction in having been so, when he lately dined with Mr. Arbuthnot, where Mr. McPherson also was. With regard to the Act itself it almost puts an end to the penal laws against us, as the exceptions are so few and trifling, and purposely there is no penalty annexed to them. Besides the English Catholics have it in contemplation to apply soon for being put entirely on to apply soon for being put entirely on the same footing with other subjects; and when that happens we may now reason-promise to maintain it as long as it should promise to maintain it as long as it should continue to be the law of the land and part and parcel of the constitution. "Every prudent person amongst us," he writes, "will see how proper it is for us not to appear elevated on this occasion, so as to give any offence to Protestants, and this behavior, you (Bishop Hay) will, no doubt, recommend."

The histors held their annual meeting that former acts of repression had been deemed expedient as chiefly directed against persons who acknowledged, or were supposed to acknowledged, or over Scotland; an opinion contrary to the allegiance of the subjects of that kingdom. The preamble to the new Bill further declared that the formula hitherto turbed charge of his beloved flock.

In their letter to Cardinal Antonelli and Propagands the bishops intimated the recent death of their colleague of the Highland district, Bishop Alexander Macdonald, describing him as "a plous and devoted prelate," and a descendant of the accient family of Clan Ranaid. They also mentioned, and with honor, Mrs. Goldie, a convert, who, rather than allow her children to be brought up as Protestants, put to sea in most unfavorable weather, together with her son of Protestants, put to sea in most unfavorable weather, together with her son of seven and her daughter of eleven years of seven and her daughter of eleven years of age; and without previously giving notice to her friends, sought a home in the convent of English Nuns at Rouen, confising herself to the care of God's Providence. It is so far to the credit of the children's tutors that they did not proceed to extreme measures, but supplied the family with money.

In compliance with the request of the Nuncio at Liege Bishop Hay wrote to him some details of the state of the mission, some details of the state of the mission, not forgetting to suggest that it would be acceptable and meiltorious on the part of His Excellency to interest himself in its favor. The bishops before separating expressed their satisfaction with the results of Bishop Geddes' mission to Paris. They hoped to cerive from it much permanent good whatever might be the state. manent good whatever might be the state of public affairs in France, Meanwhile it gave them pleasure to hear of Mr. Alex, McDonell's success at Glasgow. A very large hall was hired there from the Duke of Hamilton and the Lord Provost, for the purpose, as was well known, of a Catholic chapel. The principal manufecturers placed seats in it for 200 persons, and became security for the rent, £40. The town clerk showed his read, 240. The town cieft showed his friendship, as did also the board of trade and a society for preventing emigration. Acting thus liberally they could have had no surer means of securing sober and industrious men for their employment. The opening of the chapel on 21st October made an epoch in the his-tory of the Glasgow mission. The congregation that assembled on the occasion amounted to over two hundred. Mr. MacDonell officiated in the new Mr. MacDonell officiated in the new chapel for the first time. This was welcome news to Bishop Hay; and yet his remembrance of former things caused him to have some misgiving. Mr. MacDonell's hopes were raised so high and his ambition so much excited that the cautious bishop could not help being "much afraid that he had a little touch of the common turn (perfervidium ingenium scotorum, probably,) too prevalent amongst us." This, however, was but the passing thought of the moment; ingenium scotorum, probably,) too preval-ent amongst us." This, however, was but the passing thought of the moment; for, a few days later, he bore high testi mony to the fine qualities of the Glasgow missionary. "Mr. Macdonell," he writes to Bishop Geddes, Dec. 17th, "is of a forward and intrepid disposition; but I have often seen that when Providence has a mind to bring about any event He qualifies the instrument He makes use of for that purpose; and very often a certain degree of boldness produces much better effects than two much timidity. I trust in God that that will be the case with our friend there." So far the G asgow mission was prosperous and promising. The magistrates and and promising. The magistrates and principal merchants were highly favorable; and, moreover, the associations that were arising and causing alarm to the Government, held "liberty to the Papists," as part and parcel of their

of Physic in the University of Edinor Physic in the University of the burgh, writes: "Hypertrophy of the heart is almost always present in cases of advanced cirrhotic disease, and also in the advanced stages of the inflamator affection. One may trace in patients the gradual developement of this hypergradual development of this hyper-trophy advancing pari passu (together) with the progress of the renal (kidney) affection." In a large number of these cases the kidney disease is entirely over-looked and the trouble ascribed to heart disease as a cause, when in reality the kidney disease is the cause and the heart trouble the effect. This error is made easy on account of the kidney disease having no local manifestations in the majority of cases. The kidney disease can be cured by the timely use of Warner's Safe Cure and the consequenses avoided.

In fact, so great is the power of this medicine to cleanse and purify, that diseases of aimost every name and nature are driven from the body. Mr. D. Carswell, Carswell P. That painful complaint can be quickly cured by the right remedy. Miss Mary Jane Gould, of Stoney Creek, Ont., says: "I was troubled with lumbago, and could not get relief until I used Hagyard's Yellow Oil, one bottle of which cured me entirely."
