THE FIERY TOTEM.

"Right you are," agreed Alf. "First for the tail of my lynx, and then a bee-line for the camp."

Retracing their path by the buffalo trail, the boys were soon on the home journey again. Five prairie chicken were bagged on the way, and soon the hunters were once more at the camp-ground.

Of course, Holden's first move was to strip, plunge into the river, and then robe himself in garments that were less like a rag-picker's bundle. Meantime, Arnold set to work lighting a fire and preparing the chicken for roasting on wooden spits, as their camping experience had taught them.

By midday the meal was in readiness. The birds were cooked, "biscuits" were baked in the camp-oven, the fragrant smell of coffee was issuing from a billy-tin, and all preparations completed to welcome the elder hunters.

But time went past, and there was no sign of a canoe on the river.

"I wonder if they have missed their way?" remarked Alf, to whom the waiting was a trial, considering inside calls and tempting odours.

"I don't think that's likely," said Bob. "Your dad and mine are both old backwoodsmen. I'm beginning to think something has happened—"

"An accident?"

"Possibly. But, of course, we can't tell. But it isn't like them to be late when they promised to be back by noon."

"But then, if an accident has happened to one, the other could always come back and let us know," Alf answered; and his chum returned—

"That's just what I've been thinking. I don't want to frighten you, old man, but I can't help thinking that something has gone wrong with both."

"Perhaps it's the canoe. It might have got damaged. They were exploring new water, you know."

Bob nodded.

"As likely as not. In that case they'll come back by land, and that would take some time, as, of course, they would go much quicker by water. We'll wait a little longer, and if they don't arrive we'd better have our grub. They'll turn up later."

The boys waited as patiently as possible, but ultimately, with no sign of the travellers, they were obliged to dine alone; though the meal was not eaten with customary cheerfulness, for both the boys shared forebodings of troubles to come.

STEPPING-STONES NEAR THE EDGE

IT is near the bank of the stream that we find the slippery stones.

Have we not proven that many times when wading with bare feet out into the water of some creek or larger stream? More than once, it may be, we have felt that we were in danger of losing our footing on one of these smooth, round stones lying down out of sight at the bottom; and, perhaps, we did not escape a ducking, just because we did not know what lay before us.

Out in the middle of the stream, the current runs more swiftly, washing the stones free of the slime we find nearer to the shore. Out there, too, deep holes lie in wait for the venturesome. Well for us if we heed the warning of the slippery stones near the shore and stay where we are safe.

All along the stream of life we find slippery stones, warning us to be careful how we venture too far. These have not come where they are by chance; God puts them there, hoping that we will keep within the bounds of safety.

Never a deep hole of sin, never a great temptation that is not guarded by some messenger of God, saying, "Keep back. You will go down in the swirl of the stream of sin if you come a step farther."

How does this kindly signal of coming peril reach our hearts?

What was it that whispered to us just now, recalling the pain which came to us on account of what seemed to us a slight disobedience of God's command? Ah! That was His voice appealing to us not to take another step toward evil! Every time we refuse to listen, no matter how small the temptation to evil may be, we bring upon ourselves sorrow; and that is God's stone of warning to stay away. He would not that any should suffer; but lest we know more poignant pain, He sends the sting for every passing step we take out of the straight road of right.

That the sore heartache may not come, heed the warning of the slippery stones along the bank of life's river!

Have you felt your foot slipping? Look out! Stop! turn away! Death lies out yonder!—Edgar L. Vincent, in California Christian Advocate.

Indigestion Resulted From an Inactive Liver

The Bowels Became Constipated and the Whole Digestive System Upset.

With many people constipation becomes a habit. And it is a dangerous habit which is certain sooner or later to cause serious disease.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the first and most important rule of health. When the liver becomes torpid the flow of bile into the intestines is stopped and the bowels become constipated. But you can readily overcome this condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no treatment obtainable which so promptly awakens the activity of the liver and bowels and thereby corrects derangements of the digestive system.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, of Beaver Brook, Albert Co., N.B., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a great medicine for constipation. I have suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, but got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so benefited that I began to study this malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion. I cannot praise this medicine too highly, and would advise anyone suffering from indigestion or constipation to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. My husband also claims that these pills have done him more good than any medicine he ever used. You are at liberty to use this letter."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills positively relieve and cure torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, indigestion, backache and kidney disease. Put it to the test. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edman-son, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.
