TTAWA, May 18, — Conscription for Canada; a new conscription for the Empire — these were the mighty mesages that Canada's Premier brought to parliament. In a speech that reached a great height of parliamentary eloquence—a speech that will mark the beginning of a new epoch in the domestic and foreign history of this country—Sir Robert Borden proclaimed that the capacity of voluntarism had been exhausted and that compulsory military service would be resorted to to maintain undiminished the ranks of Canada's armies at the front and the power of our striking force in the war.

Fifty thousand men will be needed;
