THE ENTENTE REPLY

The reply of the entente powers to President Wilson's peace note was received by Washington yesterday, and will be made public in Europe and America today. It has come in the form of a single note, a fact which demonstrates the perfect unanimity of the senders, their unshaking adherence to the tie which has bound them together from the outbreak of the conflict and their common determination to continue the struggle until the object sought has been gained. The significance of this cannot fail to impress itself upon Washington, especially in view of the circumstances that the president's note was addressed to each member of the entente group.
The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, who is always well-informed on questions of policy, says restitution, reparation and security against future Teutonic aggression, are included in the entente's statement of the aims for which the signatories are fighting. This means the restoration to their owners of the territory Germany has occupied, adequate indemnities for the damage done and a readjustment of boundaries which will deprive the Germanic military machine of its springboard for a leap upon the backs of its neighbors, particularly France.

The note is said to insist upon the settlement of certain ancient problems in conformity with the principle of nationality. If there is to be independent Poland the new state must be composed of not only territory under Russian dominion, but of Gall-icia, which is Austrian, and Posen and portions of east Prussia, which are German. Likewise, Italy must gain the restoration of her lost provinces in the Trentino and on the Adriatic and Bosnia and Herzegovina should go to Serbia. The Roumanian part of Transylvania should be returned to Roumania. From this principle of nationality even Bulgaria might benefit. Parts of Macedonia in Serbia and Greece and the Dobruja, largely peopled by Bulgars, might be ceded to her subject to compensation given by her to Serbia for her cowardly onslaught, and to Roumania for her contribution to that country's troubles.

And the great must be. On this point the entente allies must be irrevocable whatever other concessions they may be disposed to make. From the hour of his conquest of Constantinople, nearly five centuries ago, he has played the role of professional trouble maker of Europe. He should have been thrown out years ago, and undoubtedly would have been had it not been for the rivalries of the Great Powers, which always brought about timely intervention just as the Russian boot was raised for the final kick. On this Russia can congratulate herself upon having been unwaveringly consistent while Great Britain and France, as Lord Salisbury admitted, were wrong. Now all see eye to eye and as the Turk must go none but a strong power should be installed upon the Bosphorus. There should be no more sick men of Europe at Constantinople conspiring and intriguing with Germans and Austrians for the development of a gaudy Oriental empire.

Whatever the reply to Washington contains, however, it should be the last word of the entente as far as peace suggestions from that source are concerned. If they allowed the present interchange to be the basis of more notes designed to create a peace atmosphere they would simply be playing into the hands of Germany who, short of getting a conference, is more anxious to keep peace talk in the air than for anything else.
If, after the reply, which is about to be published, President Wilson still is in ignorance of the objects the allies seek it is his misfortune, and it would be useless besides injurious to the cause, were they to try to enlighten him further. Those who have suffered incalculable wrong know what they are fighting for, and with their respective peoples solidly behind them the knowledge should suffice. Germany, who brought this war upon the world, which scorned a conference to avert it, is not going to have a conference now. She is not going to be given another chance.

BIJOU THEATRE

Pavlowa at Her Best in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," at Bijou Today and Saturday

Pavlowa, the incomparable, will be seen at the Bijou today and tomorrow in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," that much talked-of eight-reel super-picture. Although Pavlowa is the leading light in this picture, in which she portrays the role of Pen-ella, the dumb girl, it is far from a single central figure. The story carries no less than a dozen characters, all very important to the careful development of the play, and each performs with the greatest care by Lois Weber, who adapted the scenario of "The Dumb Girl of Portici," from Auber's opera "Masaniello," a story of the strife in Italy during the seventeenth century, when the land was under the rule of the Spanish viceroys. Great as was Annette Keller-mann in "Neptune's Daughter," it is said "The Dumb Girl of Portici" surpasses it in artistic, as well as in dramatic action and development. Anna the attraction as the creator of the title role, and not only emphasizes her charm as mistress of the dance, but reveals new and surprising powers as an emotional actress. Nothing has been neglected in the matter of detail to make this production as interesting as it is thrilling, colorful and convincing. This picture will be shown on the Bijou screen at 2:30 6:30 and 8:30. Matinees 5 and 15 cents; Evenings, 15 cents.
