THE TROLLEYS

ELECTRIC INTERURBAN LINES

CHANGING SOCIAL LIFE. Knit City and Country-People Live Closer Together, and Old Types and Phases of Rural Existence Disappear.

(By Raymond, in Chicago Trionnel).
An entirely new element has entered into the social, commercial, and even the political life of the country. I have just finished a journey of 400 miles, completed within two days, over the interurban trolley system of Illinois, and am prepared to testify to the extraordinary, effect in the development of the country. ffect in the development of the country produced by the electric railroads from town to town. They are running luxurious buffet chair cars, limited trains rush from city to city, express cars, and, dast of all, the trolley line sleeper, as I can testify, is an absolute success.

testify, is an absolute success.

There is something more in this building up than a mere extension of street car service to the country. Country and eity are being knitted together and the local and suburban transportation business seems destined to pass from the steam railroad to the trolley, line within a short time. It may be many a year before the through lines of railroad, are operated by electricity, but, it, will be but a short time until all the short kines business of the country is done on cars deriving their own motive power from a central power station, often many miles away.

No Longer an Experiment

No Longer an Experiment. So new has been the development of the interurban system that there are no satisfactory figures to be furnished as, to its extent. Like the early days of setsatisfactory figures to be furnished as to its extent. Like the early days of statement in America and particularly ind the west, the interurban trolley system in every state where it has been given a fair trial far outsteps its historians. It has progressed beyond the experimental stage, but the mileage is increasing so rapidly and new systems are being developed so constantly even the finaciers who are called upon for the money-to build the lines can scarcely keep track of their investments.

One huge system in Illinois already has in operation about 475 miles of track, with 105 miles under construction, and schemes for an extension of 100 miles more. New England is gridinoned with interurban trolley lines and Ohio and fadiana have developed their systems to such an extent that after a few links in the chain are completed during next year it will be possible to go from Wheeling, W. Va., by through trolley line to Chicago and St. Louis.

carriage of express matter and light freight is progressing with equal rapid-ity in every direction. The farmer learns ity in every direction. The farmer learns to go to the city oftener, the city merichant sends his small packages by the trolley line to the country, and perishable fruits, vegetables, milk, and dairy products are to-day being transported with greater success on the trolley line than by apply suburban service; the steam fruits are furnish.

Even coal and whiskey and similar heavy products are being handled on the electric lines, and though the day may be far distant when these roads will be anything more than feeders to the steam anything more than feeders to the steam lines on aritinary bulk freight they are likely to have the monopoly of wayside transportation, and come much nearer to the consumers than the railroads can ever hope to local interurban Service. GOSPEL TABERNACLE, PARK AND Merrick streets. P. W. Philpott, pastor Pastor Philpott will preach both morning

Jacal Interuban Service.

Before going into the details of the development of the interurban transportation service of the country, which shares with the telephone and the rural free defilition service of the country, which shares with the telephone and the rural free defilition service of the country, which shares with the telephone and the rural free defilition the agricultural districts, it, is just as well to lay down certain general principles which seem to precede or follow the establishment of electric car service between centres of population.

In the first place, the ideal interurban activities runs between two large cities and taps a number of smaller cities along the way, besides reaching the purely agricultural district in between. A type of this ideal system would be a line running from Chicago to St. Louis and tapping, for instance, Joliet, Peoris, Bloomington, Decatur, Springfield, and some other towns en route, with trunk line feeders in either direction, so as to cut up the state pretty thoroughly. A similar line from Cleveland to Chacinnati is practically under operation at the present time. Within a short time a link will be completed just east of Danville which will furnish direct trolley connections between Indianapolis and St. Louis.

One of the indianapolis and St. Louis of the indianapolis and St. Louis of the indianapolis and St. Louis of the indianapolis and St. Louis.

One of the indispensable features of a successful interurban service on a large system is an abundance of small towns along the line. This ideal is furnished more completely, perhaps, by Ohio than by any other of the western commonwealths. A reference to the census figures will show an extraordinary number of small cities throp fout the State of Ohio. In all directions an interurban railer to the farmer class of the country. A boy can remain at home, do bis winout striking a prosperous commert. Ohio is Gridironed.

sult in that to-day one may traverse the State, east, and west, north and south, from Boston to the Berkshires and from the Commeticut line to the shadow of the mountains, reaching every important population centre in the State, without touching the railroad where the cars are propelled by steam.

In Pennsylvania the mining section the oil country and the rich agricultural valleys are alike tapped by at least 1,500 milles of interurban roads. The lake shore in Ohio from Cleveland to Toledo is excellently served by the trolley, while from Indianapolis.

in operation about 475 miles of track, with 105 miles under construction, and schemes for an extension of 100 miles more. New England is gridironed with interrurban trolley lines and Ohio and Indiana have developed their systems to such an extent that after a few links in the chain are completed during next year it will be possible to go from Wheeling. W. Va., by through trolley line to Chicago and St. Louis.

Bridging the Mississippi.

There is more than usual significance in the fact that it has been found advantageous to build a great bridge across the Mississippi river at St. Louis for the use of the Illinois interurban system.

The passenger service is fully establish. Small Towns Not Hurt.

ing oftener to the city. They find they can get city types of clothes as cheaply as they formerly could the antiquated garments which once distinguished the agriculturist.

The gawky country boy and girl is disappearing so rapidly that there will soon be little material in that line left for the comic weeklies, because the type is being wiped out by the interurban railroad.

It is too early to determine exact rewhich has brought the city competition home to him. All he had to do was to increase his stock, add to its variety, discard unsaleable types, and study modern styles. Dealing in goods by wholesale, the freight charges alone would insure him a good profit, while the individual customer would go to the city only so long as the city furnished better styles or smaller prices either in clothing or in kitchen utensils. The small cities of the State have been built up by the interurban railroad and the mer chants and bankers of cities like Dan wille, Champaign and Decatur are the
