Introspective.

Another year lies before us, another milestone has been passed and Time has added to His annual calendar the figures 1920. No person looking down the vista of the twelve months ahead can foretell, with accuracy, or in the light of omniscience, anything of the joys or sorrows, the reverses or successes, the fortunes or disorders of the Year of Our Lord, 1921, upon the threshold of which the world now stands. No man is gifted with such wisdom or range of vision that he can assert without doubt that such and such things will actually occur, unless it be those astronomical observers, who make certain tables of Zodiacal, Solar and Lunar changes and base certain observations on the mutations of the planets in their orbits. The year but recently tolled out by the bells of Christendom, opened with great promise for a world not wholly relieved of the pressure of war, but expectations were unfortunately unfulfilled. The beginning of the year upon which we now enter, does not hold out in a similar degree the promise of 1920. For that reason, perhaps, its passage and conclusion may witness more material results for prosperity and happiness everywhere.

We have done with 1920 in many ways, but its recession into the chamber of Time, does not release us from having to bear numerous of its obligations. The legacies left by the past twelve months are with us yet, and have to be adjusted and apportioned. The promises of 1920 have to be carried out in a manner compatible with their importance, for while the old year has died and a new one has been born, the impress of the dead has been left upon the living, and a thousand matters left over from the affairs of the past annual period will have to be straightened out and administered. The procession of years make up as it were, a kind of current account—it may be a series—the transactions of the preceding running into the succeeding, and practically never ending or being finally balanced. It might be said without risk of arousing a discussion on times and seasons, that to us—in Newfoundland at least—the years are, in a sense, inseparably connected with past, present and future, for the trade and commerce, the interests and ventures of one year invariably overlap and enter into those of the other, sometimes advantageous, sometimes the other side of being profitable. And that is where the knowledge and real acumen of the men engaged in the pursuits mentioned come into play. The uncertainties bring out every last bit of zeal and keenness possessed by them in an effort to meet and beat competitors and trade rivals, and come out on the right side of the accounts. And it is good that all must place reliance upon their natural abilities. Omniscient man would quickly come to naught, and his works to destruction.

For Newfoundland, then, who can prophesy that which lies ahead, that which is concealed within the boundaries of the coming three hundred and sixty-two days. The experiences of the past may—and must—assist in overcoming the difficulties and complications of the future; for there are bound to be many of these. No country can escape them. But there is no country so capable and resourceful as Newfoundland to meet and cope with whatever adverse situations that will arise. The past has proven that. The future will perfect it. Our business men have courage to engage in their usual enterprise, and courage to meet and cope successfully with financial upheavals. If to courage is allied unity on all sides, then there are two invincible forces arrayed side by side. And neither the one nor the other should be found lacking when required. But unity above all things. A solid, unbroken front presented to any peril that may approach. A solidification of opinion when anything inimical to the interests of the dominion, be it local or foreign, is far superior to threats and blusterings. In a national sense there should be but one sentiment—that of upholding the commercial honor and boosting the commercial fortunes of the land in which we live and are proud to acknowledge. Naturally there are bound to be differences of opinion on various matters, but these may all be discussed in a fair and equitable spirit, without that heat and ascendancy of passion which, alas, has been too characteristic. No one man can lay claim to exclusive loyalty, no body of men can, but a population—in unity—can be exclusively loyal to their country, and their country's good. If in such a spirit all agree to meet whatever may befall in 1921, half the battle will be won before it is joined, and therein let us hope that we shall pull through unscathed and without loss of prestige or national honor.

Notes and Comments.

Don't forget to write it.

May it be fraught with every happiness and prosperity.

When the League of Nations become the football of politics, it is time to call the game—Life.

Newfoundland deserves a better 1921 than 1920. Let all see that she gets it.

"How much coal are you burning this year?"
"Oh, about one out of every three pieces."

With the Fish Regulations about to be thrown into the discard, why not follow suit with the Food Control Board? Both together would not make an unpleasant New Year gift.

'Life' says that the costume of a Native East Indian woman consists of a strip of cheese cloth eight yards long. A modern maiden thereupon rises to ask what becomes of the other seven and a half yards.

Outstripped. An exchange comments on the fact that in the elimination contest between fashion and modesty, fashion is winning by more than the proverbial neck.

In times of high prices, a little earning is a dangerous thing. Newfoundlanders have found it so.

Conundrum. Why are school teachers like a certain make of car? Because they give the most service (in Newfoundland) for the least money.

When a man gets fifty dollars a week, he tells his wife that he gets forty; his friends that he gets one hundred—but oh, you Income Tax Assessor.

The Herald.

With the suspension from publication on Friday last, New Year's Eve, and the retirement of Sir P. T. McGrath, its managing Editor, there passes from the arena of journalism one of the most powerful writers of current times. Having spent thirty years in the newspaper world, the retiring Editor had ample opportunities of knowing many men and witnessing many scenes, the knowledge thereby gained being ever turned to good advantage for the papers which he served. As a controlling power in political journalism he will be missed, but it is hoped that he will not permit his very vigorous pen to rust. The Herald itself was too well known to need any detailed reference. Its disappearance will be regretted, but perhaps like the Phoenix it may arise from its ashes, doubly powerful and influential, it not being altogether known yet whether its suspension is permanent or temporary. So far as can be learned negotiations are now in progress for its purchase, and it is quite possible that once more it will take its part in public matters, and discuss them as it ever did, without fear or favor. It was unfortunate that the official notice of the closing did not reach the Telegram on Friday last, in time for its publication to synchronize with that of the last issue of the Herald. We give it space beneath to-day, and whilst not saying Farewell, we offer the retiring Editor and staff the greetings of the season, and, if not with the Herald, hope to hear of their again being made free of the fraternity of journalists, with some other newspaper.

VALEDICTORY.

(From Friday's Herald.)
With this issue the HERALD suspends publication, possibly only for a period, or perhaps for all time. Whether it will resume under new management or be voluntarily liquidated will depend on negotiations now in progress, and which may eventually within the next month.

Since its establishment more than thirty years ago, first, as the "Mercury" and later as the "Herald," this journal has played a most prominent part in the life of the Colony, and it is gratifying to those connected with it to find that if it disappears it will not be without regret by many that it withdraws from the newspaper arena. Its Managing Director and Editor, who completes today thirty years of what a distinguished professional career described as "brain worrying journalism," avails of the occasion to gratefully thank its readers and advertising patrons for the support given it in the past, and also those who have personally expressed their sorrow that the HERALD's daily record of events will no longer be available. He would also like to thank the Daily Star for the complimentary references in the editorial of Tuesday last, reprinted in the next column.

In ringing down the curtain to-day, both on the activities of the year 1920 and its own, the HERALD expresses the hope that the coming year may be marked by an increased prosperity and good fortune for Newfoundland and all those who dwell within it.

Open Market in Italy.

LABRADOR FISH SALES UNRESTRICTED TO ALL COUNTRIES.

The following communication was received from the Department of Marine and Fisheries by the Fish Exporters on New Year's Eve. It states that Labrador fish is now freed from all restrictions, exporters being at liberty to sell it in any way, and where they please, while Italy has been made an open market for shore fish since the Department of the Royal Gazette will contain the revised regulations.

December 31, 1920.

Dear Sir:—I am instructed to advise you that certain changes in the Fish Export Regulations are in course of completion, and will in all probability be gazetted early next week.

It is contemplated to entirely suspend the Export Regulations for the present as regards both Labrador and Shore Fish for Italy, and to suspend them for the present as regards Labrador fish only for all other markets. Pending completion of the necessary formalities special permission will be granted by the Codfish Exportation Board (in accordance with Part III Section (a) of the Rules and Regulations referring to shipments to Italy) to any license holders wishing to ship fish to Italy.

Yours truly,

H. V. HUTCHINGS,
Deputy Min. Marine & Fisheries.

Christmas Tree at Meth. Orphanage

The children of the Methodist Orphanage spent a most enjoyable afternoon Thursday, Dec. 30th.
The dining-room, which in itself is a large and beautiful place, was gaily decorated for the occasion. A fine tree was laden with gifts from which each child received one, a bag of candy and chocolates; but the sight that interested the little girls was the three long tables which groined under the weight of the good things provided for them and to which they did ample justice.

Among the gifts provided was a warm and comfortable coat for each child, given by a prominent gentleman of the City.

The visitors were many, among them being Mrs. R. A. Squires and Lady Crobie, Mrs. Pitts and Miss McKay, the City clergymen and their wives and other friends.
Too much praise cannot be given to Mrs. W. J. Herder and her daughters, who were the promoters and who worked loyally and faithfully to make the Tree a success.

Crew of Euphrates Safe.

RESCUED BY S.S. GALILEO.

The safety of the crew of the S.S. Euphrates has been ascertained in a wireless message received at 10 o'clock last night by the Radio Station at Cape Race. The message reads:—"Taken all crew off trawler Euphrates in sinking condition Lat. 44.24 N. Long. 45.27 W. Dangerous to navigation. Inform St. John's Nfld."

JONES, Master Galileo.
Since Tuesday last when the little steamer left Bell Island for St. John's there has been considerable anxiety as to the fate of the vessel. It was reported that it had been wrecked on Tuesday morning last, and was caught in the S.E. snow storm that came up a couple of hours later, and was last seen by the Ingraham about 11 a.m. off Flatrock. It is apparent that when the weather became too thick, Capt. Dawe ran the Euphrates off the land in the height of the storm, and Tuesday night when the wind changed to S.W. and blew a gale the little steamer was unable to make back, probably through her engines getting out of order, and was blown further off to sea. Though no particulars are at hand it is evident that the crew were not taken off the steamer until yesterday afternoon as Captain Jones of the Galileo, no doubt, witnessed Cape Race as soon as he had rescued the mariners. The news that the crew of six men are safe on board a large steamer bound to New York will be a great relief to the wives and families of the men.

The S.S. Galileo is the second steamer of the Wilson line of the steamer. The old Galileo was called the rescue boat of the Atlantic. In the year 1889 she towed the S.S. Tankerville, to this port, and the latter ship leaving here after having repairs effected rescued Captain Arthur Jackman and his crew off the S.S. Plover. The Tankerville was bound to Philadelphia and the Plover was coming from Sydney to St. John's. Captain Jackman and his crew had given up all hopes of rescue, their boats being smashed and the ship in a sinking condition when the rescue ship happened along.

C.C.C. BAND DANCE MEETING.—There will be a meeting of all lady friends of the C.C.C. Band in the C.C.C. Hall on tomorrow, Tuesday, January 4th, at 4 o'clock to make arrangements for the Band Dance on Thursday next, January 6th. The Band have no Ladies' Committee, therefore, an invitation is extended to all who are interested in its welfare, and a large attendance is requested.—Jan. 3, 21

R. C. Services.

On New Year's Day High Mass was celebrated at the R. C. Cathedral by Bishop Renout, Rev. Dr. Carter and Rev. Fr. Leamy being deacon and sub-deacon. Rev. Dr. Green was master of ceremonies. On Sunday High Mass was celebrated by His Grace the Archbishop, Rev. Dr. Greene being master of ceremonies. Immediately after the service, procession of the Blessed Sacrament was held in the church, the sacred Host afterwards was placed on the Altar of Repose when the forty hours adoration commenced. Pontifical respers were sung at night, Bishop Renout officiating. The sermon was preached by Monsignor McDermott. There were large congregations at all the services.

Wesley Church.

Fine Sermons; Excellent Music.
The New Year services were largely attended. In the morning Rev. W. B. Hugden, B.A., preached a very able sermon on "Bridge Building," taking as his basis Hebrews 5th Chap. 25th verse: "Who hath opened up a new and living way"—referring to Him who bridged the great chasm between Divine justice and sinful men. At the evening service, the anthems rendered on Christmas Day were repeated. The choir was present in full strength and put themselves heart and voice into a full hours work, which was interlarded with a forceful exhortation by the pastor from the words, Exodus 14th Chap. 15th verse: "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." It was a most fitting address—speaking of the many problems confronting a nation and as citizens, he mentioned Columbus, Livingstone, Carver and Edison as great optimists who won out—Coming back to refer to the music, "While shepherds watched their flocks by night," composed by Roland Smart, went grandly, particularly the passage by the sopranos, "Thus spake the seraph and forthwith." The precision was splendid and harmony delightful. The congregation then sang heartily, "Standing at the portal of the opening year," followed by that very brilliant composition of Adolphus Adam, "O Holy Night." It was remarkably good in the chorus parts, "Fall on your knees, Oh, hear the angel voices," and "Behold your King before Him lowly laid." Mr. Chaplin taking the high and difficult tenor solo most effectively, while the altos blended in their part with much taste and expression. The last anthem, "Glory to God in the highest," can best be termed an outburst of holy song. Miss Bartlett took her solo with verve and sweetness. Her words, "The people that in darkness have seen a great light," were clearly enunciated and faithful service. The basses took up their leads with strength and put some power into the allegro part, "Break forth with joy." The skill of the organist behind his choir was the secret of the great success, coupled with careful practice. In recognition of Mr. Pratt's gratuitous and faithful services the Official Board sent some valuable silverware to his home last week, which pleased Mr. Pratt very much. A.W.M.

At St. Joseph's Hall, Hoylestown, a Grand 3 Act Comedy-Drama will take place Twelfth Night, Jan. 6th, entitled "Blundering Billie," under the direction of Mr. T. M. White.—Jan. 3, 21

To-Night's Services.

Special services will be held in Cochrane Street and Wesley Churches to-night, the subject at both being "Thanksgiving and Confession." The speaker at the Centennial Church will be Rev. E. W. Forbes, and at Wesley Rev. D. B. Hemmelen. All are invited, the musical programme at both churches, promising a deal of excellence.

A Souvenir of Twillingate.
We thank the Twillingate Sun for a copy of "Souvenir of Twillingate" published by that paper. This is a very interesting little journal, well printed and containing some very fine articles and illustrations, mainly of Twillingate. Amongst the varied contributions are articles by Rev. Canon Smith and Rev. Canon Lockyer. Considering the difficulties of publishing in the out-ports, we must congratulate the Twillingate Sun on the excellence of this little publication.

A Dainty Souvenir.

We thank the publisher of the Western Star, Mr. A. L. Barrett, for a dainty little souvenir in the shape of a pocket calendar and diary for 1921. This booklet is of convenient size for the waistcoat pocket, is very nicely bound and is printed on art paper, which altogether produces an excellent effect. The Western Star has our congratulations on the excellence of their little souvenir.

Filthy Den Unearthed

WHEN POLICE RAID HOUSE IN DARDANELLES—CATS AND DOGS SLEEP WITH OCCUPANTS.

A scene that simply boggles description met the astonished gaze of the police who last week raided the McManus home, situated in the "Dardanelles," to search for stolen goods. If it were not for the fact that the story is vouched for by Head Constable Byrne, himself, it would almost be unbelievable. Here, in a house which contained but two rooms, one 9 feet by 6 feet and the other 12 feet by 9 feet lived six people, four men and two women, and over a score of dogs and cats. The sleeping room is the smaller of the two and contained nothing but rags strewn over the floor. In this room on the rags, slept the six so-called human occupants, surrounded by cats and dogs. When the police entered they cleared out all the dogs they could find before attempting to search for the stolen property. When, however, they began, very gingerly, to turn over the rags, every new and then another canine specimen would put in appearance until finally twenty-two of the animals of all shapes, sizes and colours were brought to light. In a tub under the table of the living room were found a dog and nine pups. This tub, by the way, was used for baking purposes! The four men were placed under arrest as a result of the search, and later one of the women was also taken in custody. The other woman, who was "boarder," knew nothing about the robbery and was allowed to go free. On the afternoon following the raid Constables Lee and Fletcher, Health Inspector Mackey and Mr. Wadden the landlord, took possession of the house and closed it up. Some time ago Mr. Wadden attempted to clear his unclean tenants out, but they refused to go. The landlord then got permission from the magistrates to forcibly evict them, and he took two men with him to help close the place up. When, however, these men saw the unsavoury nature of the den they made some excuse to get Mr. Wadden out of the way, and they took their departure. This house has long been an eyesore, even to such a place as the "Dardanelles," and the police deserve great credit for clearing it out. It is to be hoped that in the near future all other dens of this sort will be cleaned out for in this way only can the city be thoroughly cleansed of crime and disease.
