THE WILBURS ARE COMING. Nothing more than the bare announcement that this favorite organization will play an engagement at the Opera House for one week, commencing Thursday, Sept. 10, is necessary for the inhabitants of London. They come this year stronger than ever, with several additions to their already extensive repertoire, and a number of new and startling features. Manager Wilbur is pleased nounce that he has revived this season upon a magnificent and elaborate scale, the celebrated marches and special dances which met with such favor in the past. An entire new set of march costumes has been provided. THE PHANTOSCOPE TESTED.

The latest marvel, the phantoscope was given a trial performance at the Grand Opera House on Saturday evenng. The instrument was placed in the balcony, and the pictures were thrown upon a white screen on the stage. A wrestling match, Niagara Falls, a bicycle race, an osculatory performance and other scenes, were reproduced successfully, every movement being shown from start to finish, even the motion of the lips when speaking. The human figures were life-sized, and the features were shown very distinctly. The phantoscope will be exhibited at the Fair. Prof. Jenkins, an electrical expert from Washington, D. Artie Grayson, a little fellow about years of age, whose home is at 20 Dundas street, had a marvelous escape from death on Saturday afternoon. He was on the road in front of the house, watching the crowd gather for the boat, when a trolley and wagon approached from opposite directions, and trapped him. He turn-to escape the car, and fell under the horse's feet. People who saw the ac-cident shuddered as the boy fell, expecting he would be trampled to death, but, strange to say, the little fellow was uninjured, except for some stight bruises. He was picked up and carried into the house, and is now doing nicely. No blame can be attached to the driver of the wagon

Soldiers Will Arrive Today ... Wet Night for Wolseley Barracks Men.

Tommy Atkins had a dreary night last night, but this is one of the soldier's joys.

The boys from the barracks have turned the northern portion of Carling's Farm into a canvas city for the reception of the thousand or twelve hundred volunteers who will commence to arrive today. The soldiers at the barracks think that they were worked unnecessarily hard in having to put up the tents for the whole outfit. There are about 265 tents, and Col. Smith remarked that if they never had any harder work than striking tents they would get through the world easily. The idea in having the Wolseley Barracks men do this was not to make them expert, but in case the weather became bad, the tents would be up, and the ground

The battalions will begin to arrive today. The first to take up their quarters, it is expected, will be the Twenty-second Battalion, from Woodstock and Ingersoll, under command of Major Hegler, of Ingersoll, who re-places Lieut.-Col. Munroe, who has been appointed on the staff. These will be sandwiched between the Thirtieth Battalion and the Twenty-first Battalion, having the center section of the camp. They will arrive about 12 o'clock, and will come in on both the G. T. R. and the C. P. R. under control of Lieut.-Col. Beattie, of Windsor. They will come by the
