Local Happenings

Among successful candidates for grade "C" not reported in last week's issue was Nina Taylor who had an aggregate of 387.

Dr. Miller, Supt. of the N. S. Sanatorium, will be present at a T. B. clinic in Bridgetown and Digby in the near future. Those who are in need of an examination watch out for the date later.

There will be a special meeting of the Women's Institute at the Board of Trade rooms on Wednesday, Aug. 30th at 3.30 p.m. It is especially desirable that the attendance should be large as matters of unusual interest come up.

The Dental Clinic held at the Clinic Rooms, Bridgetown, was a great success. A large number of the school children with defective teeth presented themselves for treatment. Only the necessitous class received attention. Drs. Anderson and Warey were in attendance.

Miss Pearl L. Chute, P.H.N., Bridgetown, was in attendance at the tubercular clinic which was held at the Red Cross rooms, Tuesday, at Weymouth. Many people took advantage of this clinic and had an examination by Dr. C. M. Bayne, of the Provincial Sanatorium, who was in charge of the clinic. Dr. Bayne was assisted by local doctors.

The electrical storm passed over here on Friday afternoon and evening. No serious damage is reported, but there were some narrow escapes. A bolt entered the County Hospital and struck the range in the basement, grounding through the concrete base upon which the stove was set. A considerable explosion was made, alarming the inmates. David Pinkney had just a few moments ago left the immediate vicinity. Lighting also entered the dining room of the Alms House but did no particular damage. A number of other similar occurrences are reported from various parts of the county, but not attended by any fatalities or damage of a serious nature. The storm was the severest of the season, and rain fell in torrents.

New Woodman—Cartoonist.

"See yourself as others see you"—Ned Woodman, the noted cartoonist and humorist who comes here soon with the Chautauqua, may not draw your picture on his easel but he will draw some things that you know well and will know better and from a different angle, perhaps, after he has drawn them.

However familiar you may be with the work of Ned Woodman in the newspapers, humorous publications and trade periodicals of the country, you know little about him until you have seen and heard him as an entertainer.

Woodman's humor is of such a character that the printing-press can only show you a small part of it.

To begin with, you would probably smile if you met him on the street, because he is funny just to look at.

In face and figure, voice and gesture, language and idea he is quaint, unconventional and entertaining. You could listen to his remarks, stories, dialect readings and verses, even if you were blind-folded, and be highly entertained; but you'd better use your eyes, because his "lectures" are built around those big crayon pictures which he draws for you while you are listening to him.

Some of these pictures are pretty, others are irresistibly comical and all are strong and spirited and have some sort of point to them. Pleasant and laughable surprises pervade his entire program, and yet you carry away something better than a mere memory of having been amused. Such words as "instructive" and "uplifting" are sometimes used by ministers and others in speaking of his work. He admits that he doesn't see just how they figure it out, but he hopes he is not doing much harm.

"See him and hear him,—laugh and then think,—and then laugh some more.—August 31st.
