

NAPOLEON—(After Meissonier).

eagles. With the instinct of genius he appealed to the French innate love of glory. "From yonder pyramids," he exclaimed to his officers, "four thousand years look down upon you;" and they snatched victory from the very jaws of death. But England's sailor hero, Nelson, countervailed his victories on land by greater victories at sea. The great battles of the Nile,