

TO OUR FRIENDS.

The splendid reception accorded the Industrial World and National Economist both by the press and public is sufficient proof that a work
HAS BEEN APPRECIATED.

No one should be loath to add his name to those who subscribe, and to speak a good word for a journal that will be the exponent of Improved National Standards upon all questions appertaining to the future of the commonwealth.

EVERY CITY AND TOWN, to which every village and hamlet throughout the entire Dominion, will be represented by trustworthy correspondents.

The Industrial World will be entirely
INDEPENDENT OF PARTY
political ties or affiliations. Subjects will be discussed upon their merits without reference to the interests of political leaders or political considerations.

The very best talent in the Dominion will be employed in discussing living vital topics—and advocating such economic reforms and measures as promise to give stability to National Industries.

Correspondence on every commercial, trade or industrial question will find a place in these columns—such should be concise and to the point—the name of the writer accompanying his communication, as a guarantee of good faith.

Every manufacturer, every merchant, every trade representative, is earnestly invited to make a special effort to introduce and maintain the Industrial World in his neighborhood.

The price per annum of the Industrial World (gold or platinum) to be paid at the lowest possible figure.

The Head Office of the Industrial World has been established at the Capital of the Dominion—OTTAWA—it being found that statistical and other necessary information is more readily obtainable there. Offices have been opened in Toronto and Montreal for the reception of advertisements and the preparation of Price Currents, and general commercial news.

NO EXPENSE
will be spared to make the Industrial World and National Economist perfect in every particular—a mirror of the Dominion as it is, an advocate of the Dominion as it should be.

Address all letters—

YOUNG AND PRETTY AND BRIGHT.

Into the Editor's sanctum
I come a maid with eyes of blue,
His hair in golden tresses hung
On her font a number two.

The Editor motions the maiden
To a seat in the easy chair,
While he hurriedly pulls his vest down
And smooths his ruffled hair.

Then asks the fair-haired angel
What her wish might mean,
"Some dances party, I'm sure," he said,
"Or of a church caught, I ween."

"Thou couldst a little notice
In the local column see?
Please not that point, my gentle girl,
For that cause we're be."

"O my!" said the lovely being,
"You really mistake me quite,
And the witching glance of her azure eye
Tell all on the Editor bright.

"I have a little poem
Concerning the snow and ice;
And all the girls in our set agree
That it is quite too awfully nice."

The maiden left the poem;
"Twas printed the following day,
Heaven help the defenceless sea for
She'll school-tilly lyrics must pay.

When a young female singer
Comes to "2 with a lot of gush,
It's her . . . and promptly repeats,
And . . . my labelled "sush."

But if the anxious poet
Be you . . . and pretty and bright,
It's safe to bet his money
That her efforts will see the light.

• WILL I BE LIKE YOU?

A gentleman, who for years has been more or less under the influence of liquor, and whose red nose and bloated figure stamped him as an incubus, had gone home to his wife and children in his usual condition. He was not unkind in act or words. It was a delight to play at games with his little ones, as he was able, and to entertain them with wonderful stories. On this occasion the family were all together in the sitting room, and the usual games having been played, little Freddie, a lad about six years of age, had climbed up on his father's knee, and was asking him all sorts of boyish questions. He talked as a child will—of what he would do when he was a "big man"—asked if he would be like papa then, and finally, after a long and serious look into his father's face, with every shade of childlike curiosity in voice and glance, put to him thus bewildering inquiry—

"Papa, when I grow up to be a big man will my nose be red like yours and my face all swelled?" "Ah! why should that swollen face grow redder than tons won't be? Why should his arms so quickly draw that boy to his breast? And why should tears flow and voice tremble as he replied in words and tone that made mother's heart glad—

"No, Freddie! please God, you won't be like me when you get to be a man, and neither will your father, my boy, for from this hour he will lead a sober life."

"Be like him!" He had not thought of that before, and the bare possibility staggered him. All the love of his heart cried out against such a fate.

That boy! His pride going about with a bloated face and poisoned breath? No, not he was not prepared for that! Never before had he seen his own looks so clearly; they were reflected in the boy's—the boy grown to manhood; and honor, affection and reason came to the rescue. The child had preached a sermon no orator could deliver, and innocence and ignorance had accomplished what learning and logic had aimed at in vain.
