

us that they have been very successful in their displays of butter at the Fall Fairs and Industrial Exhibitions. We know that Mr. McCrimmon has that valuable quality, energy, and it is evident that he is expending it in a useful manner. He has our sincere congratulations and good wishes for the future.

It may interest some to know that Mr. McKay, of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, N. W. T., ("Billy" McKay's father), has offered a bonus to those who shall run the first creamery in that section of the Dominion. Men of such public spirit deserve our respect. -- would there were more such. Mr. W. E. McKay since his departure from College last June has been having a busy time on his father's place. They have a large acreage of grazing land, and this year had 750 acres of grain crop, which I have lately been informed they harvested in one month. During the early part of the summer, Mr. McKay, senior, was much away from the farm attending to his duties as member of the Legislative Assembly, leaving much responsibility on Billy's shoulders. We had the pleasure of visiting him this summer and from our experience can assure others who may do likewise, that they will receive a hearty and cordial welcome. At some future time, if space permit, we will place before our readers a few items regarding that far land.

Harvard, who achieved fame last year as the College Auctioneer, is now hard at work farming near St. Catharines. Upon whom shall the mantle of this great man fall? Now ambitious First Year men, "don't all speak at once."

Literary Society.

THE first regular meeting of this Society was held in the gymnasium on Friday evening Oct. 12th. The attendance was quite up to expectations, and all through the meeting an interest was shown which augurs well for the success of the Society during the coming season.

After the usual routine of business had been gone through with, Prof. Day was called to the platform. The Prof. delivered his remarks in his usual felicitous style. He urged the members of the Society to avail themselves of every opportunity to improve their oratorical powers. Something is expected of everyone who takes a course here, and when you go home you will be asked to take part in many things which will task your powers to the utmost. If the members will follow the advice that our worthy Prof. gave them they will have no reason to regret the many little annoyances which beset those who appear in public without experience.

Owing to the fact that the program was gotten up in great haste, the remainder of the evening was not up to the standard. The extempore debate: "Resolved, that Dairying is more profitable than Fruit Farming," proved to be interesting and at times amusing. King and Peterson contributed to the literary part of the program, while Rob- in rendered valuable service in the musical.

Julius Caesar was a Roman citizen. He wasn't much a L. O., but he grewed up with the country, and after a while he bunched the conventions and got elected boss. One Fourth of July or something, Caesar went up to the Capitol to see about a bill. A man met him on the steps and told him to beware of the ides of March. Caesar laughed "Ha, ha," and told the man to depress the front of his waist coat, and went on into the big pant. Some time afterwards L. came out again and adjourned to the S. P. Q. R. Saloon, where a lot of Roman Senators, members and office-seekers were leaning up against the counter. Caesar offered to pay for the drinks, but nobody accepted his invitation, and he dropped on the fact that there was blood on the moon. Then somebody said something about his not having paid his ferrage when he crossed the Rubicon, and butcher-knives began flying through the atmosphere. Pretty soon Caesar saw Brutus, his next-door neighbor, coming at him with a stick, and that paralyzed him. "What has et vos irrita?" he exclaimed and laid right down, and in a few minutes the patrol wagon drove up to the door. Just the same, you bet, Caesar was no slouch. Vale, Jule! Detest. Scholter.
