OUR GRADUATES.

Mr. Hambertsoom Dseronian sailed for the Old Land on Dec. 30th last, and arrived in Liverpool on Jan. 8th. In a letter, written at 186 Aldersgate street, London, he gives a very interesting and amusing account of his voyage. During the heavy seas encountered, when the angry waves were threatening to actually wash the passengers off the vessel, he recalled very vividly some water-fights of bygone days—or nights. No one was hurt, and everybody enjoyed many a good laugh at the sight of everybody else after a rude wave had succeeded in giving them a good "sawking." Our hero was more fortunate than most of the other passengers, when the inevitable sea-sickness came on board; he says it had no effect on him at all; he was "all right;" but he admits that, in battling with a big wave, he came out second—he was all wet.
