HYMNS FOR THE CHURCH.

LXVIII.—THE FOURTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

The Collect.

Since all, who seek "THE GIFT OF GOD," b Should love to do His Will;—
With "Faith" and "Hope and Charity" May God our bosoms fill!

The Law of LIFE and Law of DEATH But we, by GOD THE SPIRIT led, His victor crown shall win.

III.d Then strive, ye saints, to live to GoD! Bring forth His fruit of grace; And give to death the carnal mind, With each affection base!

IV.e Behold-God's miracle of LOVB,-The heart renew'd restored! Behold-Man's proof of Gratitude,-His God henceforth adored!

The Lord beheld our sad estate; Cast out-forlorn-impure!
His cleansing Love was quick to heal, And wrought a wondrous cure! VI.e

Made free from Sin's defiling power, A grateful song we'll raise, And oft return to thank the Lord-Return to give Him praise!

MOSES DUNBAR. Hartford, March 10, 1777.

February 55, 1777.

[Copy of a Letter addressed to his Children, a few life. weeks previous to his death.]

MY DEAR CHILDREN,

REMEMBER your CREATOR when in youth, and learn your Creed, Lord's Prayer, Ten Commandments and Catechism, and go to Church as often as you can, and prepare yourselves, as soon as you are of proper age to be worthy partakers of the Lord's Supper. I charge you all never to leave the Church. Your own mother grouned out this good advice for you to me when on her death-bed. I am now in Hartford gaol condemned to death for high treason against the state of Connecticut. I was thirty years old last June the fourteenth day. God bless you MOSES DUNBAR. O! remember your father and mother, and be dutiful and kind to your present mother .- The Calendar.

STUDY A CHILD'S CAPACITIES.

If some are naturally dull, and yet strive to do well, notice the effort, and do not censure the dulness. A teacher might as well scold a child for being nearsighted, as for being naturally dull. Some children have a great verbal memory, others are quite the reverse. Some minds develope early, others late .-Some have great powers of acquiring, others of originating. Some may appear stupid, because the true spring of character has never been touched. The paying for one already purchased, is thus enabled to obtain funds from the Society, to an extent not exceeding the amount dunce of a school, may turn out in the end, the living, progressive, wonder-working genius of the age. In order to exert the best spiritual influence we must understand the spirit upon which we wish to exert the funds of the Society, from bonuses and other sources, have that influence. For with the human mind we must so increased, that the full amount of the shares subscribed for work with nature and not against it. Like the leaf of the nettle, if touched one way, it stings like a wasp; wise than by the monthly subscriptions before mentioned, the if the other, it is softer than satin. If we would do mortgage is given up to him, and his property is thus freed from justice to the human mind, we must find its peculiar all incumbrance. characteristics, and adapt ourselves to individual wants. In conversation on this point with a friend who is now the principal in one of our best grammar schools, and to whose instruction I look back with delight-"your remarks," said he, "are quite true; let me tell you a little incident, which bears upon this point. Last summer, I had a girl who was exceedof the division, and seemed to care but little about her books. It so happened that as a relaxation, I I noticed that this girl had a remarkably clear, sweet voice; and I said to her, 'Jane you have a good voice, and you may lead in the singing." She brightened up, and from that time her mind seemed more active. Her lessons were attended to, and she soon gained a high rank. One day as I was going home, I overtook

"Did you draw these?" said the teacher, "Yes sir," said the boy, with a downcast look.

"I do not think it is well for boys to draw in their books," said the teacher, "and I would rub these out if I were you; but they are well done. Did you ever take lessons.

"No sir," said the boy, his eyes sparkling. "Well, I think you have a talent for this thing; I at leisure, at home, and bring it to me. In the meantime see how well you can recite your lessons." The boy felt he was understood. He began to love his teacher. He became animated and fond of his books. He took delight in gratifying his teacher by his faithfulness to his studies; while the teacher ok every opportunity to encourage him in his natural desires. The boy became one of the first scholars, and gained the medal before he left school. After this he became an engraver, laid up money enough to go to Europe, studied the works of old masters, sent ome productions from his own pencil, which found a place in some of the best collections of paintings, and is now one of the most promising artists of his years in the country. After the boy gained the medal, he sent the teacher a beautiful picture as a token of respect; and I doubt not, this day, he feels that that teacher, by the judicious encouragement he gave to the natural turn of his mind, has had a great moral and spiritual effect on his character .- Gospel Messenger.

ROUNDHEADS-ORIGIN OF THE NAME.

The people mutinied in London, from which the king retired, with all the royal family. When they left Whitehall, they went through a multitude of several thousand roundheads; every one held a staff in his hand, with a white paper placard, whereon was in-scribed the word "liberty." Henrietta herself, with her usual petulant vivacity, had previously given the name of roundhead to these opponents. In opposiclose and short, that their turbulent heads looked as round as bowls, excepting that their ears seemed to jut out in an extraordinary manner. Samuel Barnadiston, a noted republican of that century was in his vouth the leader of a deputation of London apprentices, for the purpose of communicating to parliament their notions regarding civil and religious government. The Queen who saw this posse arrive at Whitehall, closely clipped heads, and saw at the same time that Samuel was a personable apprentice; upon which

A N ASSOCIATION of this description may be considered as having two main objects. First, it affords the easiest and ultimately the most profitable means of investing savings, small or otherwise; and, secondly, it gives a ready means of acquiring unincumbered real property, without the capital usually necessary for that purpose.

BUILDING SOCIETIES, established in England, have been infull and successful operation for the last twenty-five years, or there-abouts; the benefits and advantages arising from them having been fully developed and ascertained during that period. The introduction of the system into this country has been sanctioned by the Legislature, and an Act has been passed to authorize the Incorporation of such Associations. A similar institution, in the city of Montreal, has recently commenced its operations under the most favourable auspices.

The shares of the Society are £100 each, and are paid up by regular monthly instalments of 10s. on each share. These monthly payments are compulsory, and continue to the termination of the Society, which will be in about ten years. The money thus paid in is allowed to accumulate for a few months; and, as soon as the amount is sufficient, a meeting of the members takes place, and the money is offered in loans to the highest bidders, who pay such bonuses therefor as they may consider it worth while. Any member desirous either of building or pur-chasing a house, (whether for his own use or to rent), or of of his share or shares subscribed for. As security for such advance, he gives the Society a mortgage upon real estate; upon which mortgage he continues to pay the interest merely until

To a party already possessing leasehold or freehold property, having incumbrances on it, the Society holds out peculiar ad vantages; for, instead of being liable to be peremptorily called upon for the repayment of the principal sum borrowed, and being subjected to severe loss and expense if unable to meet the demand, the mere payment of the interest (in addition to the monthly subscription) absolutely exempts him from all such

Among other beneficial results to be anticipated from the establishment of a Building Society in Toronto, may be enumerated the following:

 The permanent improvement of the city and its vicinity, y increasing the number of buildings of a superior class.
 Enabling persons of small but regular incomes to apply a high rank. One day as I was going home, I overtook her with a school companion. "Well, Jane," said I, "you are getting along very well, how happens it, you do much better now than at the beginning of the quarter?"
