

revolution; the unsettled and unsettling state of the discipline of economics; the emergence of a multipolar world. To meet the challenge and seize the opportunity of this GATT Round will require changes in both domestic and multilateral decision-making. The alternative to making these changes will be the emergence of a world trading system which no government planned or desired. The manifold pressures for adjustment will not abate. The genie is out of the bottle and the genie is blind. Governments should have vision.