

“ longer move in another orbit from “ his people, and like some superior “ planet, attract, repel, influence, and “ direct their motions by his own.
 “ He and they are parts of the same “ system, intimately joined, and co“ operating together, acting, and acted “ upon, limiting, and limited, con-“ trouling, and controuled by one “ another; and when he ceases to “ stand in this relation to them, he “ ceases to stand in any.” There is no dispute about all this in theory, neither would there be any in practice, were there a perfect coincidence in the views and interests of the whole political body, as is here supposed, by our author. When I say, a perfect coincidence of views and interests, I do not mean that which a philosopher may discover in his closet, but a coincidence, which the actions of every

D

mem-