TAKE A TIP FROM 10,000,000 PEOPLE

The other day I asked a man from Montreal: "What is the car fare in Canada's biggest city?"

"Six cents," he answered.

"We pay seven cents; just the same as Boston," interjected a Pittsburg visitor.

And then we talked car fares with a dozen travellers around the lobby of the Tecumseh.

Down in Brantford the people own the street railway and they find it necessary to charge themselves five cents cash. That is the rate in Fort William; in Edmonton the fare is six cents cash. Both are public ownership railways, too.

SIX CENT FARES in fact are in effect in 86 Can= adian and American cities. Even five cent cash fares are disappearing under stress of high costs of operation.

Today 238 Cities Are Paying More Than Five Cents

Ten million people in these cities have agreed that in the interests of fair wages, good service and their city's prosperity, their street railways should not be strangled by out-of-date fare restrictions.
