AUSTRIA OPENS FIGHT AGAINST FEMALE LABOR

Women Are Now to Be Excluded From Becoming Teachers in Vienna
Public Schools.

GOVERNMENT FORMING HOUSEHOLD SCHOOLS

Girls Will Be Trained in Domestic Science to Stop Them From Competing for Men's Work.

VIENNA, March 7.—Women have been shut out, temporarily at least, from any new places in the teaching staffs of the Vienna public schools. The cry of unjust discrimination has been raised, and the whole question of women's employment in Austria is under review.

The exclusion of women candidates for teachers in the public schools is taken by the Vienna city council on the ground that "so few vacancies exist that no further applications for employment of women teachers will be received until further notice." Nothing is said, however, about men teachers.

Since the population is increasing steadily and new schools are constantly required, the council's action is regarded as extraordinary. Some trace it to the agitation among women teachers for pay on equal terms with men.

At present women teachers are paid on a far lower scale than their male colleagues, although they perform the same work, and have been required to go through exactly the same course of preparation, and to take the same examination as the men. For some time past they have been voicing their complaints at this treatment, alleging that nearly all the best positions in the schools are reserved for men. The Christian Socialist majority in the city council, however, argues that as women are not heads of families with children dependent upon them for support they have no claim to be paid as high salaries as men. The women deny that this has anything to do with the case, and say that even if it had they too are often called upon to support aged parents or younger brothers and sisters.

Through Austria the employment of women in professional and commercial occupations is increasing steadily.

Young women are generally willing to work for lower wages, and they are constantly crowding out the men.

Many of the ticket clerks in the railway stations are women, and government offices and banks are constantly adding women to their staff.

So serious has the influx of women into these fields of labor heretofore regarded as exclusively masculine become, that the Austrian ministry of public works is trying to offset the consequences by establishing a number of high schools for instruction in household economy. The first of these will be opened at the beginning of the next school year in September.

The curriculum will be especially directed towards training women in domestic science, to enable them to occupy administrative positions as superintendents or heads of public institutions, such as hospitals, sanatoriums, asylums, orphanages, schools, hotels and boarding houses.

These schools will extend over three years, and will include all kinds of special classes as well as evening classes for young women engaged in earning their living in business during the day. It is claimed that there will not be a single subject in the plan of instruction which will not be of service to future wives and mothers.

The women's employment question has also been engaging the attention of the ministry, and the Vienna educational authorities. Efforts are being made to keep the children leaving school from entering upon "blind alley" occupations, as so many are doing at the present time. A employment council has been organized in Vienna which will keep the public school teachers informed regarding the conditions of labor in various branches, and it will be the duty of the teachers to advise the pupils, and also the parents, of the facts, and to urge that they be taken into account in selecting the future occupation of the child. It is hoped that this will not only benefit the individual children but will also tend to improve the whole national economic situation.

MUST ALLOW WIFE'S MOTHER TO VISIT HER

Vienna Civil Court Gives Hard
Blow to Men Who Have a Mother-in-Law.

BERLIN, March 7.—(Special to The Sunday World.)—The judge of a civil court in Vienna has decided that a husband cannot prevent his mother-in-law from coming to his house to see her daughter.

The decision was given in a case where a railway official named Michna wrote a letter to his mother-in-law forbidding her to enter his house. She disregarded the communications, and Michna brought an action charging her with disturbing him in the peaceful possession of his own home, and asked for a judicial order prohibiting the lady from making any further visits.

It was urged on behalf of the mother-in-law that the wife had the right to receive her mother in the common home of her husband and herself, and that the husband's application was illegal.

Rejecting all the evidence as irrelevant, the judge ruled that a husband could not forbid his wife to receive her own mother in the home, and that in accepting her daughter's invitation to come there, the mother was performing no act, and therefore, was not interfering with any rights of quite possession.

Women will find more news of interest to them in The World's magazine page every morning than in any other paper.

FRENCH WARSHIPS TO WELCOME KING

Imposing Military and Naval Demonstration Awaits His Majesty.

PARIS, March 7.—(Special to The Sunday World.)—A squadron of French warships will act as an escort to the British royal yacht which brings King George and Queen Mary across the channel next month, and there will be an imposing military and naval demonstration in their honor, when they reach French soil. Every precaution will be taken to see that the visit of their Majesties is unmarred by a single unpleasant incident. While there is nothing to indicate any activity on the part of the anarchists, every known member of the Reds will be kept under close surveillance until the royal visitors have returned home. The militant suffragette colony here is regarded as more a source of danger than the anarchists. Word has reached the police that the Fanharettes are planning a demonstration, but they will have a small chance of accomplishing anything. The French police are not so tender in dealing with such matters as the English. On the principle that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, they do not wait for an overt act before they take a hand.

DESCRIPTIVE.
He was accustomed to drinking straight, plain drinks. But one day they invaded him into taking one of those mixed affairs: one of those that not only includes a combination of liquids, but also orange peel, pineapple, a cherry, and other rags outsiders.

"Well, what do you think of it?" he was asked by the bunch that had come the evening.

"He looked disapprovingly at the sundae garden before him."

"Boys," he said, "I object to drinking a mince pie."
