Age and Colors

The old idea that the delights of colored raiment were suitable for only the young so one of the many superstitions that have raiment were suitable for only the young is one of the many superstitions that have now gone into the melting pot of fashion. We now know that only youth can afford to go in dreary and somber shades. Youth supplies its own colors in the shape of bright eyes and glowing cheeks, but when the light of the eye grows dim and the rose of the cheek fades the color must be sought elsewhere.

When the hair turns gray or white, however, along with other changes, this rule does not hold so strictly. Such hair has a wonderful softening and lighting effect and often makes somber attire possible. Black and gray are very beautiful with iron gray hair, but when the hair retains its natural color black is seldom, possible for a woman past her first youth. That enchanting color, gray, can be worn only if it is brightened up in some way, s with a touch of blue and gold embroid-y. The idea that the dignity of age lls for sad-colored raiment is quite exploded.
