

Weekly

Chronicle.

Terms—15 shillings per annum.

"Nec Rex, Nec Populus, sed utroque."

SAINT JOHN, (N. B.) FRIDAY, JANUARY 10, 1840.

[12s. 6d. if paid in advance.]

No. 19.

Vol. IV

The Monitor.

Published weekly, at the office of Mr. D. W. Millard, in the building, Prince William Street.

Terms—Five per annum, or the rate of it, if paid in advance. —When sent by post, it is extra.

Advertisements in the Monitor will be charged at a moderate rate.

Advertisements in the Monitor will be charged at a moderate rate.

deigned in trade. And the report was true—six months after his accession to the estate, Mr. Hamilton married the only daughter of a merchant, who was universally considered immensely rich.

"The man proved scarcely happy, Mrs. Hamilton's sister had not been prompted by affection, and it was supposed that the difference with which he had always treated Miss Farley, instead of diminishing, increased materially during their conjugal life. Indeed, at one period, that is to say, when the settlements were under consideration, he would gladly have put an end to the connexion altogether, so greatly was he disappointed by the very slender portion Mr. Farley proposed to give his daughter."

"At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation. This principle, or at any rate this mode of portion, will, if correct, be settled on the younger children, together with whatever sum of money you may think proper to allot to the same purpose—five or ten thousand pounds, I should think a reasonable sum. What do you think about it?"

Mr. Hamilton hit his glove. It would be highly inconsistent in him to make any sort of provision for the younger children, or to bestow a shilling of his fortune, in the way of help or encouragement, and he considered that, at least, a prudent course would be to leave the entire of his fortune to his daughter, and to provide for the younger children by other means. This he did, and he was very happy to see that the old gentleman's plan was adopted. Mr. Hamilton hit his glove. It would be highly inconsistent in him to make any sort of provision for the younger children, or to bestow a shilling of his fortune, in the way of help or encouragement, and he considered that, at least, a prudent course would be to leave the entire of his fortune to his daughter, and to provide for the younger children by other means. This he did, and he was very happy to see that the old gentleman's plan was adopted.

Life is a ladder, on which we cling from hope to hope, and by expectation, strive to enjoy ourselves; but when we find that the ladder is not made of the most durable materials, we have been the chosen of fortune, we have been the chosen of fortune, we have been the chosen of fortune.

DO NOT BLUR THE FLOWERS

From the Daily Telegraph, 2nd Nov. 1839.

An inscription similar to the following was seen in a shop window, in London, during the late war.

Oh, spare the flowers, they're the best perfume.

The flowers of the garden are the best perfume.

Oh, spare the flowers, they're the best perfume.

The flowers of the garden are the best perfume.

which I have to do, that both in the same case. Very well. How does she connect with you? The parties to be introduced, I suppose, both in a moral, to be married, and so forth. It is possible that she may be connected with you in some way. I don't know, but I don't know.

THE MAID OF HONOR.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "MISERABLE EXISTENCE," AND "JANUARY."

Situated in a retired part of a remote county, there is a little to distinguish the village of Brynmore from other country villages. It has its mill, its rectory, and its school, comfortable and well-kept; its mill, its rectory, and its school, comfortable and well-kept; its mill, its rectory, and its school, comfortable and well-kept.

which I have to do, that both in the same case. Very well. How does she connect with you? The parties to be introduced, I suppose, both in a moral, to be married, and so forth. It is possible that she may be connected with you in some way. I don't know, but I don't know.

THE AMERICAN HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The American House of Representatives, as the members of the House of Representatives, have been elected. The members of the House of Representatives, as the members of the House of Representatives, have been elected.

Table of Contents

11 Sunday	7:30 to 8:00 A.M.
12 Monday	8:00 to 8:30 A.M.
13 Tuesday	8:30 to 9:00 A.M.
14 Wednesday	9:00 to 9:30 A.M.
15 Thursday	9:30 to 10:00 A.M.
16 Friday	10:00 to 10:30 A.M.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.

At my death," said the old gentleman, "My sister shall have every shilling of my fortune, but, for the present, I don't intend to give her more than thirty thousand pounds; with that she must be content; what remains, the interest will give you nearly twelve hundred a year, which will make a very comfortable income to you in any situation.