HOLLISWAY'S OINTMENT.
 EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF A CASE.
 MARY KINGSFORD.
 Her story is told in the most interesting manner by her own pen.
 Wm. Broome, Messenger of the Metropolitan Hospital, St. George's, London, writes to the effect that in the year 1841, he was called in to attend a patient, Mrs. Kingsford, who had been confined for a long time in St. George's Hospital. Her illness was of a peculiar nature, and she had been suffering from it for some time. Her condition was such that she was unable to move, and she had been confined to her bed for many weeks. Her family was unable to care for her, and she was brought to St. George's Hospital. Mr. Broome attended her for some time, but was unable to effect a cure. He then advised that she be sent to the Metropolitan Hospital, where she was placed under the care of Dr. Williams. It was there that she was cured by Hollisway's Ointment. Her story is a remarkable one, and is well worth reading.

Reflections of a Police Officer.
 MARY KINGSFORD.
 "Bless you—bless you"—she gasped in the intervals of her convulsive sobs.
 "There is some wretched misapprehension in the business, I am quite sure," I continued; "but at all events I shall not let you be frightened by a word."
 "I did not mean that," I took it out of the book in which I had looked it up, and placed it before her. It was a splendid omelette, encircled by a wreath of bay leaves, and was the work of a first-rate cook. I had been thinking of it for some time, and had just been looking it up in the book. I placed it before her, and she looked at it with a mixture of surprise and delight. "I did not mean that," she said, "I only meant to say that I was afraid of you. I am quite sure that you are a good man, and I am sure that you will do me no harm."
