

Sir Herbert Ames Speaks of Patriotic Needs

What Is Expected of New Brunswick—Striking Story That Should Arouse All to Sense of Duty

Gentlemen, if I were inclined to be conceited, I would only have to go down any street corner in any Canadian city and as I watch a regiment march by I realize that there is not one man in that regiment but who is doing more than I or any other man who stays at home can possibly do for the benefit of Canada.

Such was the striking opening sentence of Sir Herbert Ames' speech last night at the Cliff Club dinner given by Senator Thorne to the head of the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Between forty and fifty of the leading citizens were present at the meeting and the occasion marked a new life-giving elixir to the St. John branch of the fund, for problems are discussed informally and a better understanding of the needs of the fund secured by those present.
