Do you know that one or two of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets was the very thing you were looking for? If you don't, ask anybody who has ever used them, and they will tell you. Listen to what Mr. R. Jachowski, Postmaster at Peasport, Ont., says: "I have given Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets a fair trial, and can with every confidence recommend them. I generally use only half a tablet after eating, and it never fails to give me relief."

If you would eat what you like, when you like, use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have got much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Water in Your Blood.

Lots of people have thin, watery blood—they eat plenty but don't digest. When digestion is poor, food isn't converted into nourishment—in consequence the body rapidly loses strength. To positively renew health, nothing equals Ferrozone. It excites sharp appetite, makes the stomach digest, forms life sustaining blood. Abundant strength is sure to follow. If you need more vitality, extra energy, better nerves, then use Ferrozone, the medical triumph of the age. Fifty cents buys a box of fifty chocolate coated Ferrozone tablets.

In all things it is better to hope than to despair.
Most men like to address women by their Christian name.

In some of the Swiss valleys the inhabitants are all afflicted with goitre or "thick neck." Instead of regarding this as a deformity they seem to think it a natural feature of physical development, and tourists passing through the valleys are sometimes jeered by the goitrous inhabitants, because they are without this offensive swelling. Thus a form of disease may become so common that it is regarded as a natural and necessary condition of life. It is so, to a large extent, with what are called diseases of women. Every woman suffers more or less from irregularity, ulceration, debilitating drains, or female weakness, and this suffering is so common and so universal that many women accept it as a condition natural and necessary to their sex. But it is a condition as unnatural as it is unnecessary. The use of Dr. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak then the delicate womanly organs and regulates the womanly functions, so that woman is practically delivered from the pain and misery which eat up ten years of her life—between the ages of fifteen and forty-five. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well.

The devil needs to do nothing for the man who has nothing to do.

Goodness thinks no ill where no ill seems.

GIRLS DRESS LIKE MEN.

Pit Brown Workers in Lancashire Collarless Wear Trousers—Their Headgear Also Worthy of Note.

Pit brown girls are among the most remarkable women workers in England. They work as hard as men and dress almost like men. Very few pit brown girls are found in Britain outside Lancashire, and 5,000 of them and employment at the coal mines. Their work lies on the pit brow—at the surface and not below. Once women were employed in the coal seams, but in 1842 in the face of great opposition from colliery owners an act was passed prohibiting women and children from being employed below the surface in coal mines.

The duties of the pit brown ladies consist in dealing with the coal as it comes up the shaft to the pit head. When the cage reaches the top, the girls haul out the wagons, which contain several hundred-weight of coal each, and run them on rails to a tipping machine, which shoots the coal down below to the screen or riddling machine. This is an iron slide several yards long, with holes through which the coal drops at various stages into trucks waiting beneath. It is jerked about by steam power, and the coal moves downward while the girls stationed alongside pick out the rubbish. It is dusty work.

The girls start work at 6 o'clock in the morning and finish at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon. As may be judged, their work is arduous, and for its performance they receive 50 cents or less a day. Men who do the same work get $1. Taken together, the pit brown ladies are a strong, healthy lot, ranging in age from eighteen to twenty-five.

Their dress is distinctive and peculiar. The working costume consists of trousers, clogs and a coat which has at one time been worn by a brother or has come from a rummage stall. When going to and from work, the girls wear petticoats, which they roll up round the waist while engaged on their pit brow. At most pits nowadays the trousers are hidden in front by a short apron, but this is a comparatively recent departure in the way of dress. The headgear is also worthy of note. The hair is closely covered with a handkerchief, on the top of which is a soft bonnet.

Painted "The Derby Day."

A delightful old gentleman is Mr. W. R. Frith, R. A., the famous painter of "The Derby Day." "The Railway Station," and many other celebrated pictures. A trifle bent with the weight of years, he is eighty-five, though anything but decrepit, alert, and of no great stature, with bushy, white hair, brushed back from a great forehead, a rugged complexion, an aquiline nose, blue eyes, wonderfully keen and alert, and a whimsical smile, he is just such a character as Dickens would have loved to paint, which recalls the fact that Mr. Frith painted one of the best portraits ever done of the great novelist. Mr. Frith delights in showing visitors the copy of an old Dutch engraving he made when a boy, and telling the story of how it led to his adopting art as a profession, and the sequel. Mr. Frith's father, anxious to know whether his son, then about fourteen years old, had any prospects as an artist, submitted the copy in question to the verdict of a number of distinguished painters, foregathered at a dinner party. The verdict was favorable, and so the boy became a painter. Years afterwards he met Mr. Chalon, R. A., who had been one of the judges on that momentous evening. Showing him the copy reproduced him of the incident, which Mr. Chalon had forgotten. "Do you mean to say I advised you to become a painter on such evidence as that?" cried the R. A. "I ought to be ashamed of myself!"—M. P.

A Bad Place in Court.

At a circuit court in an English county town a young countrywoman was under examination.
"Now, my good girl," said the advocate. "You say you were near the spot when the prisoner at the bar committed the act. Was any one with you at the time?"
"Yes, yes, my lord and advocate; my sweetheart was with me."
"Courtier, I suppose," was again asked. "Is he here? We want corroborative evidence."
"Yes, my advocate and lord; shut your eyes."
"We had better call him into court," here remarked the judge.
"No, no, my lord!" cried the witnesses. "Goodness, no! I can hardly get him to court me when we're alone, and I'm sure he won't court me here afore you all."

"Quincy Tufts."

Lord Carnarvon, during his visit to the United States last year, took a commendable interest in all things. He was passing one day through a small Eastern town when he noticed the shop of a man called Quincy Tufts. Mr. Tufts was his name upon his sign in huge letters, and Lord Carnarvon misunderstood that odd name. He imagined that it represented some interesting object which he had never seen. Accordingly, entering the shop, the distinguished foreigner said to the proprietor: "Pray, sir, what are Quincy tufts? Show me some, won't you?"

Dinners in the Sixteenth Century.

State banquets became very elaborate and expensive in the earlier half of the sixteenth century, which was the period of pageants and mumming. Excesses in feasting in Edward III's reign were so great that the King framed rules, forbidding any common man to have dainty dishes or costly drinks at his table. He did not, however, practice economy in his own household, for the marriage feast of his third son, Lionel, Duke of Clarence, was exceedingly sumptuous. There were thirty courses to it, and the fragments sufficient to feed a thousand people.

THINK IT OVER.

Something You Can See in Any Restaurant or Cafe.

A physician puts the query: Have you never noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from 60 to 80 years; many of them bald and all perhaps gray, but none of them feeble or senile?

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something.

If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating you will observe that they are not munching bran crackers nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health foods; on the contrary they seem to prefer a juicy roast of beef, a properly turned loin of mutton, and even the deadly broiled lobster is not altogether ignored.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food, and it is upon this point that an endeavor to live upon bran crackers.

There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee, and many other good things are rank poisons, but these cadaverous, sickly looking individuals are a striking condemnation of their own theories.

The matter in a nutshell is that if the stomach secretes the natural digestive juices in sufficient quantities any wholesome food will be promptly digested; if the stomach does not do so, and certain foods are taken, one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal will remove all difficulty, because they supply just what every weak stomach lacks, pepsin, hydro-chloric acid, diastase and nux.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not act upon the bowels, and in fact are not strictly a medicine, as they act almost entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it thoroughly, and thus giving a much-needed rest and giving an appetite for the next meal.

Of people who travel nine out of ten use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, knowing them to be perfectly safe to use at any time, and also having found out by experience that they are a safeguard against indigestion in any form, and eating, as they have to, at all hours and all kinds of food, the travelling public for years have pinned their faith to Stuart's Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50 cents for full-sized package, and any druggist from Maine to California, if his opinion were asked, will say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most popular and successful remedy for any stomach trouble.

HER SKIN WAS YELLOW.

"I had only to try Dr. Hamilton's Pills to appreciate their merit," writes Miss Annie S. Bryce, of Woodstock. "My system was out of order. My blood was weak and thin. I had a nasty, murky complexion. My skin was hard and dry. The first box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills made a complete change. I felt better at once. Healthy color came into my face. In about three weeks I was cured." Dr. Hamilton's Pills effect an easy cure. Try these good pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00; at all dealers.

Keeds Special Tax.

Germany imposed a special tax on department stores in 1900, and now it appears that the owners have shifted the burden upon the manufacturers from whom they draw supplies. Naturally the manufacturers kick at that, for they were already handicapped by stringent Government regulations. The small retailers, in whose interest the special tax law was formed, say that its workings are of no benefit to their trade.

THE ROOT OF NEURALGIC HEADACHE.

Is an irritable condition of the nerves caused by cold. Relief comes quickly from Nerviline, the greatest pain reliever of to-day. "I consider Nerviline a magical remedy for neuralgia," writes Mrs. E. G. Harris, of Baltimore. "But I never worry if Nerviline is in the house. A few applications never yet failed to kill the pain. I can now recommend Nerviline for stiffness, rheumatism and muscular pains." In use nearly fifty years; try Nerviline yourself.

Misplaced Devotion.

He (bitterly)—If I were rich you'd marry me readily enough! She—Don't, Gussie, don't! Such devotion breaks my heart! He—What do you mean? She—Often have you praised my beauty, but never before my common sense!

PROVED IN MOUNT FOREST.

Every doctor in this town tried his best to relieve Mrs. J. Withom, of Asthma; none succeeded. "For years," she states, "I was a dreadful sufferer; nothing gave relief. At times I found it necessary to have all the doors and windows open to get my breath. When in despair I heard of Catarrhose. I used it and now am perfectly cured." This proves beyond doubt that any case of Asthma is curable with Catarrhose. No remedy so pleasant, none so absolutely certain to thoroughly cure; try Catarrhose yourself; it's guaranteed.

HAVE "WEATHER SENSE."

Australian Bushmen Have Gift of Prophecy as to Seasons.

One of the most remarkable instances of science learning from savagery and instinct is that which is of everyday occurrence in Australia. The Australian natives are expert weather prophets. It is a gift that can hardly be called instinct, inasmuch as they form their judgment from a thousand and one signs about them, such as the average white would not notice. The appearance of the trees, the length of the stalk of certain reeds, the actions and doings of native animals, insects, reptiles and fish; in short, a thousand and one signs, the purport of which they have learned by long centuries of observation, constitute their stock in trade as weather prophets.

Years ago, in the days of the old Botany Bay settlement, the English learned to appreciate the "weather sense" of the natives, and later, when the colony became civilized and weather stations were established here and there over the country, the best native weather prophets were employed as members of the staff. Many stories are related of their wonderful powers of foresight.

In Australia the conditions are such that it would be desirable if the meteorologists could foretell the weather six to eight months in advance, something which no weather forecaster is able to accomplish, twenty-four hours being the longest period at which he can or will venture a forecast.

But the native weather doctors do not hesitate to predict what will occur six months to a year ahead, and what is most remarkable, they hit it correctly more often than one would expect.

There is a story current that several years ago the sheep farmers and stockmen in a certain quarter of Australia were much wrought up, thinking the year would be followed by a severe drought.

The Weather Bureau men held the same opinion, but would not, of course, venture any prognostications so far ahead. Yet, while all were confident that the next year would bring death to the herds and flocks, an old native weather prophet, attached to the station shook his head, declaring that he had serious doubts of such a thing happening.

Prevailed upon to set his wits to work, he gathered together provisions and set forth into the desert. From year to year one might possibly say he was going to consult the signs and would return in about a month. Where he went or what he did no one knew, but at the end of the month he returned, declaring that the white men were all fools and that, instead of drought, the next season would be unusually rainy. No one believed him, but, sure enough, when next season arrived more rain fell than had been experienced in years.

In dry, arid countries like Australia it is oftentimes easier to forecast weather than in others. Plant life has adapted itself to the conditions, and by studying their growth from year to year one might possibly in time learn the significance of the short or long growth of plants.

Doubtless, after leaving the station the old weather prophet went direct to some out of the way locality where grew some particular plant, occurring there and in no other part of the region, which during seasons preceding a wet or dry spell forecast weather events by some peculiarity of growth or structure not noticeable to a white person, but plain enough to the native.

Funs and Promotions.

Canon Melville, who died the other day in his ninety-second year, owed his earliest promotion to a pun, affirms a London paper. When the late Earl of Dudley, who knew Mr. Melville sufficiently to remember that his Christian name was David, had a living at his disposal, he received a letter containing only the words, "Lord, remember David." The Earl's reply was no less terse and Scriptural: "Thou art the man!" Perhaps the earliest instance of ecclesiastical promotion won by a pun is that of curate James Joseph, who was prompted by Swift to take this text for a sermon preached in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, before the Viceroy, "Butler," the Duke of Ormond: "Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but forgot him." The Rev. Dr. Mountain, who was the son of a beggar, owed nearly every step of his successful promotions in great part to his facetiousness, and won the last step of all by a single jest. When he was consulted, as Bishop of Durham, by George II. as to the fittest person to fill the vacant archiepiscopal see of York he replied: "Sir, hadst thou faith as a grain of mustard seed thou wouldst say to this Mountain (dramatically striking his breast), 'Be thou removed and cast into this sea (see)!' That George II. should so understand and appreciate the joke as to accept its suggestion is perhaps the strangest part of the story.

He Did Not Bite.

There is a new London story about Charles Darwin.
"Two 'peeing boys,'" said Miss Lister, "being friends of Darwin, thought one day that they would play a joke on him. They caught a butterfly, a grasshopper, a beetle and a centipede, and out of these creatures they made a strange, composite insect. They took the centipede's body, the butterfly's wings, the grasshopper's legs, and the beetle's head, and they glued them together carefully. Then, with their new bug in a box, they knocked at Darwin's door.

"We've caught this bug in a field," they said. "Can you tell us what kind of a bug it is, sir?"
"Darwin looked at the bug and then he looked at the boys. He smiled slightly.

"Did it hum when you caught it?" he asked.
"Yes," they answered, nudging one another.
"Then," said Darwin, "it is a humbug."

Many Women Suffer Untold Agony From Kidney Trouble.

Very often they think it is from so-called "female disease." There is less female trouble than they think. Women suffer from backache, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, and a dragging-down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female trouble." Why, then, blame all your trouble to female disease? With healthy kidneys, few women will ever have "female disorders." The kidneys are so closely connected with all the internal organs, that when the kidneys go wrong, everything goes wrong. Much distress would be saved if women would only take at stated intervals.

Miss Nellie Clark, Lambeth, Ont., tells of her cure in the following words:—"I suffered for about two years with kidney trouble. I ached all over, especially in the small of my back; not being able to sleep well, no appetite, menstruation irregular, nervous irritability, and back-dust deposit in urine, were some of my symptoms. I took Doan's Kidney Pills. The pain in my back gradually left me, my appetite returned, I slept well, and am effectively cured. I can highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from kidney trouble."

MESSRS. C. RICHARDS & CO.

Gents.—After suffering for seven years with inflammatory rheumatism so bad that I was eleven months confined to my room, and for two years could not dress myself without help, your agent gave me a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT in May, 1897, and asked me to try it, which I did, and was so well pleased with the results, I procured more. Five bottles completely cured me, and I have had no return of the pain for eighteen months. The above facts are well known to everybody in this village and neighborhood.

Yours gratefully,
