Why Some Towns Are Dead

The town that never has anything to do in a public way is on the road to the cemetery. The citizen who will do nothing for his town is helping to dig the grave. The man that curses the town furnishes the coffin. The man who says he has no time from his business to give to municipal affairs is making the shroud. The man who will not advertise is driving the hearse; the man who is pulling back from any public enterprise throws bouquets on the grave. The man who is so stingy as to be forever howling hard times, preaches the funeral sermon, sings the doxology, and thus the town lies buried from all sorrow and care, and the Mayor should never leave town without a crape band on his hat.

A young lady from this village, whose name we withhold on account of her social position in the community, while alighting from a street car in Hamilton one day this week timidly asked the conductor, "Will I get a shock if I step on the car track?" "No Miss, not unless you put your other foot on trolley wire at the same time," replied the conductor politely as he rang the bell to go ahead.

Campers in Trouble

Tenting on the old Camp Ground is not as pleasant as some suppose, at least the party of campers on Green's flats have discovered. Of late great difficulty has been encountered in securing an adequate supply of milk for cooking and drinking purposes. The campers could stand the inconvenience no longer. A cow guaranteed quiet and free from disease with no bad habits was purchased from a nearby farmer. In fact the animal had been made a pet of around the farmer's home. The cow was delivered last week at the camp, and bossy was immediately turned out to pasture. The early education of the cow appears to have been sadly neglected, for the first day out it wandered into the camper's tents and devoured all the eatables in sight besides committing other acts of vandalism. This indiscretion on the part of the cow so enraged the campers that at a meeting held on Monday last it was decided to tie up bossy and take no chances of its committing any more such untidy acts. The cow is at present tied to the sluice gates of the swimming pool. Anyone desiring to purchase a good milker, quiet and sound in every way (with the exception of one bad habit), should inspect this animal, as this is a rare chance to purchase a good cow at a reasonable price.

He was immediately removed to his home where his injuries were attended to by Dr. McGregor.
