JOHN BULL AND HIS PEOPLE. Record of Interesting Recent Occur

in Merry Old England. Capt. Lindsay, one of the officers killed in the attack on Benson's col-umn, was a nephew of Lady Balfour of Burleigh and grandson of the late Dowager Countess of Aberdeen. The Duke of Cumberland is by Lo means a rich man, and the fact that he has voluntarily refused an income of £80,000 a year is the more remarkable. The sum in ques-tion is the sum held for his recognition of Prussia's rights over hishereditary kingdom of Hanover.

Principal Fairbrain has completed his 63rd year. He was born the son of a miller, in a Mid-Lothian village, completed his education at Edinburgh University and at Berlin, received his theological training at Glasgow, and is a D.D. of Edinburgh and Yale, and an LL.D. -of Aberdeen.

Colonel James Moncrieff Grierson, who has just been appointed quartermaster-general to the army corps to be organized at Salisbury Plain, is a Scottish officer of great experience and distinction. He is a Glasgow man, the son of the late Mr. George M. Moncrieff Grierson, and was educated at Glasgow Academy. It has been suggested that King should allow those peers who have State coaches to follow him in the procession through the city after the coronation, and this would certainly make one of the most remarkable processions ever seen in Lendon. The large firms in London who make these State coaches are already busy with orders. Lord Kinnear, who has just celebrated his birthday, is a Scotsman and a lawyer. He was educated at Glasgow and Edinburgh University, and was called to the bar in 1856 He became a Q.C. in 1881, and in same year he was appointed a judge of the Court of Sessions with the title of Lord Kinnear. In 1897 a peerage of the United Kingdom was conferred on him.

A Sharp Scots Body.

The good minister of a Scottish parish had once upon a time a great wish for an old couple to become teetotallers, which they were in no wise eager to carry out. After much pressing, however, they consented, laying down as a condition that they should be allowed to keep a bottle of "Auld Kirk" for medicinal purposes. About a fortnight afterward John began to feel his resolution but he was determined not to be the first to give way. In another week, however, he collapsed entirely. "Jenny, woman," he said,

COL. WOOLS-SAMPSON. Best Field Intelligence Officer in South Africa, and a Man of as Brave Mettle as Ever Read Of.

Colonel Wools-Sampson, who took command of the British column at Brakenlaagte after Colonel Benson's fall, is regarded as the best Intelligence officer in South Africa. He is an English Afrikander, and strongly attached to the old country. He has a wide acquaintance with the Transvaal, and knows the Boers and the Kaffirs thoroughly. When he was quite a youth, The London Star, he was one of the volunteers, chiefly British, who fought in the Sekukuni war. It was a war of great danger and hardship, and Wools-Sampson got well seasoned. In December, 1880, Wools-Sampson was in Pretoria, second in command of Nourse's Horse, an irregular corps raised for the defence of Pretoria, then besieged by the Boers. Owing to Nourse being invalided Captain Sampson was in command of the corps at the storming of Zwartkopje laager-the only British victory in that war. Mr. Duval in his book speaks of Captain Sampson as "a fine young colonial," and tells that after the fight he met him with a great hole in his throat, and a bullet in his shoulder. bullet in his shoulder.

"Why don't you go to an ambulance, Captain?" asked Duval.

"Oh, I'm all right," he replied;

"give me a little help to get on my horse, as I can't use my arm." As the brave fellow was nearly fainting, Duval and others put him on an ambulance wagon, where, making light of his wounds, he was soon endeavoring to cheer up its other occupants Captain Wools-Sampson next came into prominence in the Johannesburg Reform conspiracy of 1895. He was in business in Pretoria as a mining engineer, and there is no doubt that in all that crowd of financiers he at least meant business. He was ar-rested after the raid, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment and a fine of £2,000. The remainder of the prisoners obtained a remission of the greater part of their sentences signing a petition to Mr. Kruger, and pledging themselves not to meddle with Transvaal politics for a term of years. Wools-Sampson and Karri Davies steadily declined to do either, and they remained in prison until June, 1897, when President Kruger released them in honor of the Que jubilee. When the present war was imminent, in September, 1899, Wools-Sampson and Karri Davies were the leaders of the movement which sulted in the formation of the Im perial Light Horse in Maritzburg. "Sambo" (as he was nicknamed on the Rand) was so popular that men flocked in great numbers. At their first batile (at Elandslaagte) Wools Sampson, the real founder of the corps, was so severely wounded in the thigh that he was unable to take the field for weeks. He went through the siege of Ladysmith, and has since been employed as Intelligence Officer with various columns. During the last few months he has been at-tached to Colonel Benson's column, and the correspondent who wrote to The Times at the end told how he had guided the column on the darkest, wettest night, without a slip. Colonel Wools-Sampson, traveling with the wind as a guide led them through the darkness then the fog, when everybody in the column was predicting failure, and successfully captured the laager. He is now a tall, sinewy man, with
