THE DERBY IN 1882.

The last filly to win the Derby was Shotover, in 1802, while before her Blink Bonny had won in 1851. Yesterday's winner was bred by her owner, Chevalier E. Ginistrelli, an Italian nobleman, who has been domiciled in England for a score of years, and has had no small share of success on the turf. His best-known horse was probably Signorina, the dam of yesterday's Derby winner. Signorinetta is by Chalereux, a son of the Barcaldine horse Goodfellow and L'Etc. Chalereux won some good races in England ten years ago, and is now in the stud in France. Signorinetta had nothing in her public form that indicated her as a Derby horse. Her merit comes from her dam, and yestermerit comes from her dam, and yester-day Major Daingerfield, who is one of the stewards at woodbine, and the most successful breeder in America, very aptly recalled the answer given by the oracle to the Arab who asked if his horse would win his race.
