Women of Cuba Again Seeking Franchise.

HAVANA, CUBA.—Removal of one of the "males" from the Cuban constitution is all that the National Suffrage Party asks of congress. Statute has waited until after the election of November to make its request. The organization has addressed a petition to President Zavala, asking him to include in his first message to the new congress a recommendation that the franchise be granted to women. Such action would admit women to the polls. At the special and "two regular" sessions of congress held since President Zavala took office in May of 1921, the suffrage issue has been successfully dodged.

Mexico City Hears First Concert by Radio.

MEXICO CITY.—Newspaper reports that a concert given recently in San Antonio, Texas, was plainly audible to a select gathering in Mexico City by means of the radio telephone. This is the first time that a concert has been heard in Mexico City by means of the radio telephone. Numerous inquiries have been made at Government departments and of merchants as to the cost and delivery of the necessary apparatus to equip private plants. Hitherto there has been but scant interest in Mexico in radio, although for several months a local newspaper has maintained a plant which picks up many press messages, particularly those furnished ships at sea by the United States navy department.

The Dance of the Season—Tomorrow, Thursday night, C.C.C. Hall, at 9.30. Wonderful music by the Mae Edwards' Orchestra. Splendid Hall, good floor, the three essentials for a successful dance. You will have all three to-morrow, Thursday night at the C.C.C. Hall. Tickets at Hut-ton's, Garrett Byrne's, Blue Put-ter and The Royal Stationery.

Marie—I think a girl who whistles is most un-lady-like.
Maudie—Well, I don't know, whistling brought about my engagement.
"How was that?"

Revolt Against The Long Skirt.

The leaders of the revolt against the return of the long skirts may take heart from the fact that one of the leading lights among the Paris couturiers refuses to sponsor the longer lengths. A review of spring fashions in the Northwest Commercial Bulletin says: "In her advance spring collection, now being shown to buyers, Madame Jenny has offered many attractive models in a characteristically youthful silhouette that is short and narrow."

"Some of the dresses, even those for formal afternoon wear, are 10 inches from the floor. The back line is invariably straight and many of the skirts are straight all the way around. A novel touch is the introduction of a circular pocket at one side or a double pocket directly in front."

"Skirts are long and tight for the most part, with a new trimming feature in the form of square patch placed over the elbow. As this patch is embroidered or of contrasting material it cannot be overlooked in the tout ensemble. Speaking of embroidery, Madame Jenny has used them sparingly in her spring collection, but in compensation many crisp, white neck and sleeve finishes are in evidence, together with summy handbags of pique or organdie."

"Another conspicuous trimming note is the use of the handkerchief idea in many lines. Girdles are formed of large squares of printed silks knotted directly in front with the point in the back. A wristlet made of twisted handkerchief of bright red chiffon gives a smart touch of color to a dark frock."

The Men's and Women's new English fashions just opened at BISHOP'S for nineteen dollars and seventy cents, are freely admitted to be the equal of any thirty dollar coat in town.

Blanche Garneau Enquiry.

While there is not that deep feeling, or agitation, which some newspapers would like to make their readers feel exists in the province because of the Blanche Garneau affair, the recent developments in the case have attracted a considerable amount of interest. It is unfortunate that this murder should have given rise to such wild rumors, as it is claimed exist. The Ancient Capital is happily free from violent crimes, and when a young girl is found to death, the excitement is the more intense because of the rarity of the crime. The present enquiry by two judges of eminence is most complete, and the powers have been widened out to meet all contingencies, as had been promised by Premier Taschereau when laying the order in council before the Assembly. Those who know anything about the murder, or even think that they know something, now have their opportunity of frankly and fully expressing themselves before an impartial tribunal. The government has appointed lawyers to aid witnesses in laying their views before the Commission, and there is no excuse for any one not coming forward if he or she knows anything. So far witnesses have not appeared, except for those in official position, and it may be that this may continue to be the case. It will be a sign of bad citizenship for anyone who claims to know any detail about the murder, not yet disclosed, to remain silent now, and then, when the Commission has completed its work, begin talking again about there being something wrong, or of inefficiency.—The Review.

Fashion Has Again Raised The Barnyard.

PARIS.—Fashion, in her ever insistent search for novelty, again has invaded the barnyard. Rooster feathers have come back. They are the latest thing on smart Paris hats, and even on evening gowns. All colors are used, and when the rooster can't supply the shade, the dyer does. However, natural white and black are the most popular colors. Rooster feathers probably are about as cheap a material as can be found, but their use on chic hats has not lowered the price of bonnets. One little hat shop is displaying these "simple" but smart things at 750 francs, while other stores ask 500 and 600 francs.

Have you a Suit or Overcoat to be made. Bring it to FARRELL THE TAILOR, Adelaide Street. First class work at moderate prices.—sept 15.11

Beaded and crystallized Georgetown and simple velvets are very popular for evening wear.

Reminiscences of Olden Times.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I was very much interested in reading an account of Newfoundlanders abroad as contained in your issue of Dec. 7th. Reference was made to Hon. Donald Morison, and Capt. Richard Gossie of Vancouver. I am sure that all that is said in praise of Capt. Gossie by Hon. Donald Morison is well deserved. I too am proud of Capt. Gossie's success. He and I were friends and shipmates for many years before he left his birthplace, Spaniard's Bay. I can well remember the storms that visited Labrador and parts of Newfoundland in the early period of our lives. In this connection I would like to mention what happened at Corbett's Harbor, Labrador, during the storm of Oct. 9th, 1867. It was the splendid brigantine "Orion" and not the "Vesta" that Capt. James Keefe lost at that time. Capt. James Keefe, his brother and 4 other men were putting out more lines to the "Orion" when she drove from her moorings, taking the six men with her. Before reaching the open sea the vessel struck Coveyduck Island at the harbour's mouth, and hung there for a little while. One of the crew, James Clancey, managed to jump from the jibboom and reached dry land. Before the others could escape the vessel drove out to sea. In the contact with the rocks the bottom of the vessel was badly broken and she filled with water, but the forward part remained afloat owing to a large quantity of oil in the hold. Besides the Captain and his brother, Elijah Peddie, Richard Cockline and Michael Harper made up the crew on board. For four days the "Orion" drifted South, and the men were obliged to live on fat pork and dry flour, a small quantity of which was stored in the fore-castle, the only dry place on board. The men were lashed to the rigging and in order to procure food, one man at a time would unlash himself and carry a portion to his companions.

On October 13th, late in the afternoon, Capt. Nicholas Fitzgerald of H. Grace and a friend, the friend of Capt. Keefe, left Spaniard's Bay, Labrador for home. His schooner, "George H. Fogg" was considered the fastest vessel in the country. On his way South, something compelled him to alter his course two points, but no one on board knew the reason why. However, about twenty miles East of Bell Island, Capt. Fitzgerald spied a wreck and recognized it as the "Orion". He was not long before he was alongside and rescued his friend and the others of the crew. Thirty-six hours afterwards he arrived safely at H. Grace. When the S.S. Mastiff was despatched to Labrador, Capt. James Keefe went on her and I saw him at Punch Bowl after the arrival of the ship. Some time after, Capt. Keefe purchased the brigantine Vista, in which he brought many fine and valuable seals to Messrs. Munz & Co. of H. Grace. It is not too much to say that Capt. James Keefe was one of the best sealing captains and Master Mariner sailing from any port in Newfoundland. My object in writing is that readers may see that there was a little mix up in stating that the "Vesta" was lost in the gale of October 9th. To make this clearer, I was one of the crew of the Vista in the spring of 1871, when she was commanded by Capt. James Keefe. The spring of the year 1872 was a remarkable one in the history of the sealing fleet. That year Capt. Azariah Munden brought in the biggest load of seals in S.S. Common-dore that was ever recorded, when the name of the ship is taken into consideration. The S.S. Vanguard was built in the same year at Aberdeen, Scotland, and Capt. Munden brought her to H. Grace and I am the only one of the crew left, all the others having passed away. We left Aberdeen on Sunday morning, Feb. 9th, on a trial trip. At 2 o'clock the pilot came on board and we landed him again at Scapa Flow. We then came around the North of Scotland and Ireland. We left Portpatrick on Wednesday morning, Feb. 12th, and on the 30th, inst., at 2 p.m., we arrived at Harbor Grace. It was a liner's passage in a beautiful square rigged barque. It will be hard to find men these days that can herringbone the Western Ocean like Captain Azariah Munden. The year 1872 was a very trying time on our sealing fleet, and many vessels were lost; the "Huntress" of H. Grace being that of the Huntsmen, Captain Robert Dave, who went down with his son and 42 of a crew at the Fish Rock, near Cape Charles. Many other vessels were lost also but no men, with the actual political situation in the west were on the ribs near Battle Hr. I could write more of these hard old times, but will close now by thanking you for space.

Yours truly,
GEORGE COLLINS.
