

Thermometer Way Down.

STAY THREE YEARS AGO
 The recent snap many people are inclined to regard the present winter as the most severe one experienced in years. According to the weather records given us by a well-known meteorologist, the winter of 1920 was more severe than the present. The zero weather predominating throughout the latter part of the winter of January and the beginning of February.

Stonebreaking.

THE FIGURES THE COST.
 Our countrymen are now engaged in a great help to a class who would find little or nothing in the work of breaking stones. As it is only a means of employment, the cost of the work is not considered. A boss who has a well known wit, employed at the yards when asked a riddle as to what was the cost per yard of breaking rock, replied, "that understands fractions is puzzled to figure that out. I know; but I guess a quart of mud cost about the same as a stone."

Silver Cliff Mine.
EVERYTHING IN READINESS FOR PRODUCING.
 Mr. W. A. McKay, who is at present at Argentia, reports that the arrangements are all complete, and that the production of concentrates was started yesterday.
 Negotiations have been already started to have several articles of silverware made from the first silver produced at the mine. At the present time there are some twenty-five men employed at Silver Cliff; but as production increases, a larger staff will be taken on. Silver Cliff is the only mine (outside of Bell Island) that is in active operation in Newfoundland to-day, and Mr. McKay is to be congratulated on the energetic way in which he has developed this property.

Robberies Reported.
SHOP WINDOWS BROKEN.
 A series of robberies occurred on Water Street West, Thursday night, and three shops at least were victimized. In each case a window in the front of the store was broken, and goods such as cigarettes, tobacco, and chocolates were stolen. The robberies occurred at the stores of Mrs. Squires and Mrs. Amb, Water Street, near Sudbury, and Mrs. O'Reilly's, near Alexander Street, and were apparently the work of the same individual or individuals. It is understood the matter has been reported to the police. It is now some time since occurrences of this kind have been reported.

Innocent Man Convicted
 A singular case of mistaken identity was in the recollection of many people occurred in 1851. It is doubly remarkable as instancing the conviction of an innocent man and the liberation, according to the law, the man who was really guilty. On February 17, 1851, in the dead of night, the house of David Williams, at Truath, in the county of Brecknock, was broken open by forcing the shutters and windows of an outhouse. Williams, an old man, who with his wife, alone occupied the cottage, was alarmed by the noise, and going to the head of the stairs saw by the light of a candle the person of a man whom he recognized as one Tom Williams, a blacksmith who had formerly done some work in the house. This was only for a moment, as the light was struck out, and the burglar attacked old Williams and his wife in the dark. However, they proved too strong for him, and compelled him to take to flight. Nothing was stolen, but the drawer of a dresser in the kitchen had been ransacked, some papers of no value turned out of it, Tom Williams, the blacksmith, was tried at the following spring assizes at Brecon for the burglary, and as the old man, who had known him from his boyhood, swore to him positively, he was convicted, and sentenced to transportation. Happily for him, however, a person named Morris was present at the trial, who, on hearing the verdict, at once exculpated the convicted man, and directed the attention of the police to one Powell as the real criminal. Strict inquiry was immediately instituted, the result of which was that Powell was committed. He was tried and convicted on evidence perfectly conclusive. It seems that old Williams had lent Powell £600 on mortgage, taking as security certain title deeds. Williams commenced proceedings to recover principal and interest, and Powell committed the burglary to possess himself of the documents hence the ransacking of the dresser drawer in which he believed they had been deposited. The blacksmith was, of course, "pardoned" and discharged. But the real criminal was also discharged, although his guilt was as clear as the sun at noonday. The jury convicted him of breaking open the house "with intent to steal the title deeds"; the indictment charged him with intent to "steal the goods and chattels." The Appeal Court held the conviction bad, and so, despite of fact, and thanks to law, Powell shook the gnat dust from his feet and walked forth a free man.
