UNCLE SAM'S COUNSEL FLINGS DEFIANCE

Says the United States Will Not Allow Britain to Dictate as to Fisheries.

London, June 24.—Continuing his argument on behalf of the United States before the Hague Fisheries Tribunal, former Senator Turner outlined the negotiations preceding the treaty of 1818, and pointed out that the treaty was almost entirely conformable to the draft presented by the American negotiators, and the contents of the treaty implied that the Americans' right to fish was already existing in 1783, and was maintained in perpetuity by that treaty, and that the United States had not renounced its fishing rights in all the bays in the British possessions, but only in territorial bays.

With respect to the regularization of the fisheries, he held that the United States should regulate the fisheries by a common agreement with Great Britain and should have a share in the enforcement of such regulations.

Great Britain has no right to limit American fishermen with regard to the time or manner of fishing, he maintained.

Continuing, he maintained that the treaty of 1818 limited the sovereignty of Great Britain with regard to coastal fisheries, and held that the contention that British legislation and the British Constitution "finished" guarantees against the United States fishermen being unjustly treated by the British colonies was irrelevant.

He argued that the treaty gave the United States no right to set at defiance the wishes of the United States.

He again dwelt on the claim that the United States exercises equal sovereign power with Great Britain over the fisheries, and to support this he quoted largely from legal works and insisted that the right to fish subject to the will or pleasure of Great Britain was no right at all.

He also asserted that Great Britain would never be allowed to set at defiance the wishes of the United States.

NO ULTIMATUM SAY THE TRAINMEN

Committee Expects a Reply From the Railways Some Time Today.

Montreal, Que., June 23.—The meeting of the railwaymen's committee began early this morning, and remained in session till after noon, behind tightly closed doors. No reply to their communication of last night was received from the C. P. R., and it is not likely to be received till late tomorrow morning. Probably the reason is that no official copies of the award have been received from Ottawa yet, and in the absence of this, the company does not wish to speak.

"We have no statement to make," was all that could be obtained at C. P. R. headquarters.

While so far the G. T. R. men have not given any official notice of what they intend to do about the award.

Not an Ultimatum.

"Our note to the C. P. R. last night was not intended as an ultimatum, nor was it quite so bluntly worded as it has been made to appear," said one of the leaders this morning.

"We told them that failing the standardization of rates that we asked it would be difficult to see on what other basis we could negotiate. We did not say to them, give us what we ask at once or it's all off, as it has been made to appear."

"Will there be a strike?" was asked. "By organizations which are negotiating with the companies are not striking organizations," was the hesitating reply. "They do not strike till they have to, and until every honorable means of averting trouble has failed."

The next move in the big game, one of the most momentous labor situations of recent years in Canada, will be made by the company.

Some of the men frankly admit that they hope for negotiations; a few more impulsive are ready to put the whole thing to the test of a strike.

There is no feeling of soreness apparent among the men at the award of the board of conciliation. They do not pretend to be satisfied with it, but they say that they are confident that the board did its best.

BLAMES POLICE FOR ABSENT BOY

Dr. Scimeca Thinks Kidnappers Are Too Scared to Return Son.

New York, June 24.—An air of expectancy pervaded the home of Dr. Mariano Scimeca today and there was every indication that the anxious father and mother anticipated welcome developments in the search for their 3-year-old son, Michael, the sensational kidnapping of whom on Tuesday was followed yesterday by a reported demand from the child's abductors of $8,000 as a ransom.

Dr. Scimeca refused to make public all the details of the kidnappers' communication and declined to let the police trace the writers.

"I can do better by working alone," he said. "I expect to get my boy back today."

Dr. Scimeca has expressed a willingness to give up any amount for the return of the lad, but there seems reason for believing that no such amount as $8,000 will have to be handed over.

As the day wore on a change came over the spirits of the Scimeca household. The word that had been expected from the boy's abductors did not arrive, and Dr. Scimeca became extremely agitated. He declared that the publicity had driven the kidnappers off, and kept them from sending him the letter promised when friends opened up communication yesterday with the men who stole little Michael.

In his excitement Dr. Scimeca bitterly complained of the activity of the police and of the publicity given the case.

He declared that all he wants is to be left alone, and that the kidnappers were afraid to get into communication with him again, suspecting that the detectives would set a trap for them.

CAPTAIN CODY FATALLY HURT

British Army Expert Fell One Hundred Feet With Aeroplane.

Aldershot, England, June 24.—Capt. S. F. Cody, the American aeronaut who has been experimenting with an aeroplane for the British war office, is believed to be in a dying condition as a result of an accident on Lark's Plain yesterday, when his machine dashed to the earth from a height of 100 feet. Cody was rendered unconscious and his aeroplane smashed to bits.

Cody is a naturalized Englishman. He began his aerial experiments for the war office, but after spending $8,000 of the Government's money without visible results, more money was refused, and he spent his private fortune in his work. He taught aeronautics to the army officers. The machine in which he was injured is a cumbersome affair of his own invention, weighing two thousand pounds and having 780 feet of wing surface.

It was driven by an 80 horsepower motor.

Cody's most successful flight was made Sept. 28, 1909, when he made a cross-country flight around Aldershot, remaining in the air one hour and three minutes, flying forty-seven miles.

From its actions, H. Stern, the owner, judged it mad and he fled out of the yard and around the house to the front entrance, pursued by the animal.

Believing he would be safe by mounting the stairs, Stern hurried up the first flight. The animal pursued, and when it reached the landing of the second floor, fell down and became wedged in the narrow space.

The police were notified, and two patrolmen were sent to the rescue of the now terrified family. They attempted to pull the horse out of the hallway by means of ropes, but couldn't, so the animal was shot.

CRAZY HORSE CHASES MAN UPSTAIRS; DEAD

South Chicago Police Can't Get Animal "Unwedged"; Shoot It.

Chicago, June 24.—A horse, which, according to police diagnosis, was driven mad by the heat, occasioned much activity in South Chicago late last night.

After the horse had kicked its way out of the barn it ran about the yard. From its actions, H. Stern, the owner, judged it mad and he fled out of the yard and around the house to the front entrance, pursued by the animal.

Believing he would be safe by mounting the stairs, Stern hurried up the first flight. The animal pursued, and when it reached the landing of the second floor, fell down and became wedged in the narrow space.

The police were notified, and two patrolmen were sent to the rescue of the now terrified family. They attempted to pull the horse out of the hallway by means of ropes, but couldn't, so the animal was shot.

HUNTING IN EGYPT.

The hunter you have engaged probably at Aswan prepares during the afternoon a comfortable hole in the sand, near some footpath leading up into the mountains. Here you take up your position after dinner. No better arm-chair could be well imagined than that scooped out in the soft sand, and, after watching big-eared grey hares at play, foxes creeping stealthily by, or inquisitive owls perching on the edge of the hole, yielding to the beauty of the night, you suddenly develop a kindly feeling for wild beasts in general, and your eyes close in peaceful slumber. A hand laid on your knee awakes you, and a large whitish object, looking as big as a large donkey—is seen silently approaching. A voice whispers in your ear "Dhabab!" The whitish object cocks its ears, you fire, and five minutes later your hunter bears back to the dhabab a fine specimen of the striped hyena.—From an article in Sports Afield

ENGLAND IN EGYPT.

When England assumed sole control in 1882, Egypt was still bankrupt, with a public debt of more than $500,000,000, and an income insufficient to pay the interest and carry on the government. The public revenue in 1882 amounted to $4,500,000; in 1907, to $81,500,000; more than $10,000,000 in excess of the expenditures. On Jan. 1, 1908, the sum of $45,000,000 was in the general reserve fund, and the public debt was reduced in 1908 by $1,600,000; it now is $479,000,000. While millions have been saved and enormous public works completed, taxation has been reduced. The fellah, or peasant, formerly prostrated by taxes, enmeshed in the coils of usurers, the puppet of pashas and the victim of insupportable evils, is now contented and prosperous.

This result has been directly accomplished by the maintenance of a strict financial control. At first, enormous difficulty was encountered by the English in making changes in the system of taxation, because the people, so long accustomed to the betrayal of their interests, thought the plans proposed were simply for the purpose of increasing their burdens.

Little by little, however, they learned that another era had opened, and finally their suspicions were calmed. They then began to work with renewed energy, and now secure in the fruits of their labor, they are not merely improving their own conditions, but are building up the reputation of their country. With the regulation of the Nile, and the welfare of the peasantry, Egypt can confidently look forward to a constant development of the agricultural interests which lie at the base of national prosperity.—From an article in the World Today.

The annual report of the United States Department of Agriculture, issued a few days ago, indicates that there are 16,658,000 cattle in that country.
