Mr. Yates based his prosecution. Mr. Yates regulad that is was a case of wanton cruelty, thoughtless perhaps; but still all that had been charged in the in-formation had been charged in the in-formation had been charged in the in-formation had been relay proved. H. A. CORRECTION. To THE EDITOR: — A slight mistake has sould understand, the defendant bore neither Mr. Ellis nor his dog any emnity. He was very likely that they were passing and the puppy ran out and jumped about them to be petted, as a little dog will, and the defendant struck him or kicked him, not intendung to break his leg. Mr. Yates remarked that he thought the case as recited by the magistrate had sad and miserable, and begs of me not to talk about it." "I will go to her myself," said Kath-erine impulsively. "It is useless. Katherine," returned Lady Brandon. She will only be more miserable than ever." But Katherine would not be con-trolled. She hastened up to Veronica's room and found her favorite standing by the window. "My darling, yon have been ill," she cried. "Mamma says that you fainted." Then she started, for Veronica had turned round to greet her, and the change that had come over her was so terrible that the young heiress was shocked. Veronica's face was pale and worn, the dark eyes ware tearless, but titere was in them a look of fathomless woe. "Veronica," cried the girl, "It is true then 1 I can see from your face that it is true; there is no need to ask a ques-tion. You and Sir Marc have parted II" world !" So she wore her heart and her life away, longing only for death, that, dy-ing, she might see him again.

"I will not believe it! What has come "Peace on earth," rang the Christmas.

"Veronica," cried the girl, "It is true then! I can see from your face that it is true; there is no need to ask a ques-tion. You and Sir Marc have parted!" "Yes," she said drearily, "we have parted, Katharine-not for an hour, a day, or a year but forever."
