In it were third engineer C. W. Brown and a woman passenger. Brown carried a line to shore, and when he had effected a landing after a desperate battle with landing, after a desperate battle with the waves, aid had arrived on shore A net was rigged on the shoreline, and the passengers, women and children first, were taken from the floundering ship, three and four at a time,

The disaster in which the officer and three seamen lost their lives occurred just before the vessel yielded to the Exiled President Makes His assault of the waves and burst in two. A lifeboat, carrying the men, had just put out. A heavy sea sent it car eening back to the ship and a mountainous wave sent it crashing against the hull of the vessel. A fifth member of the boat's crew named Peterson, was washed ashore and resuscitated.

Efforts had been male earlier in the day by the officers of the steamer Helen P. Drew to induce the captain of the Santa Rosa to land his passengers, and the vessel still stood by in an attempt to aid the distressed vessel. A lifeboat was launched, but it had scarcely been caught by the waves before it was capsized, and it is believed that the first mate, W. B. Johnson, was lost. The landing of the passengers of the Santa Rosa, a large number of whom were women, was attended with the utmost danger, and acts of thrilling heroism were performed by the crew in taking their helpless charges to shore. A life raft containing 20 wosearchlights on shore lighted the scene ation in the Andes. imperfectly, so that it could not be clearly determined whether the women were rescued. The stern of the vessel, caught by a monster wave, was swung across the vision of the restate to arrive and the last to leave the basels of the restate to the page of the across the vision of the watchers shore, and whether the women were rescued out of view of the onlookers, still is unknown.

Captain H. W. Henderson, master of the Point Arguello lighthouse, was one of the first men to reach the scene of the wreck. He expressed astonishment at the grounding of the vessel.

"The weather was clear, the sea as calm as a lake and conditions ideal for ber thirteen lighthouse district, with I don't see how it was possible for the Mare Island tomorrow to assume comboat to run ashore. Way Back to Venezuela in Disguise, and Government Takes Precautions

CARACAS, July 7 .- The Venezuelan government, in order to be in reac.ness for any eventuality that may arise through the landing on the Goajira peninsula of Cipriano Castro, yesterday despatched two lattalions of troops thither on a warship. General Patro Gomez, a brother of President Gomez, commands the troops, and has instructions to watch for Castro.

The sole topic of conversation today mong the representatives of the South American republics who have been attending the celebration of Venezuela's century of independence was Castro's latest escapade. All of them expressed the opinion that it is foolhardy and men capsized off the bow of the Santa that it will be difficult for the former in the construction of a fish hatchery, Rosa.
