Margery Deane writes: "I will centees to something that a party of Americans in Paris once did. It was in all the French papers that the Prince of Wales bad given to the American beauty, Mins Camberlain, a dinner at a certain cafe. The item, by the way, was not written always in are respectful French as it might have been. Since this party had to dite somewhere, it was suggested that the prince's dinner be duplicated in every minute particular, the recom, service, courses, wines, flowers everything the same. This was done. It was a very good dinner. It was not nearly so extravagant as dinners given at Delmonice's every day in the winter. I don't think it was as dainty a dinner as an American prince, who put his mind to it, would have given a young girl, and there was nothing remarkable about it in kny way. But some of us had our curiosity satisfied, and now know just how the future King of England dines young Americans women who had be used to remark the meets them in Paris. Should lis royal lighness read this, I hope he will pardon the curiosity of four Americans who dared the duplicate his royal commands."

LAURIER'S GREAT SPEECH. OTTAWA, March 17.—Mr. Laurier's spe OTTAWA, March 17.—Mr. Laurier's speech on the Riel execution last night surpassed any of his former effects in or cut of the house, and will take rank among the great orations reported in Hansard. His elequence, grace, diction and force commanded the undivided attention of the members for tweanda quarter hours. Congratulations and compliments have been pouring in upon him ever since, and in the chamber that

It has been stated, time and again, by the Mail and by other tory organs, that it was the present intention of the French Canadian leaders to organize a purely French Canadian party, to lay aside all party ties and to have no other bonds of party in this house but that tie of race. I protest against any such assertion. Such assertion is unfounded, it is calculated to do harm, it is not founded on truth. It would be simply suicidal to pretend that French Canadians could form a party of themselves. Why, so soon as French Canadians, who are in the minority in this house and in the country, were to organize as a political party, they would compet the majority to organize as a political party, and the result must be disastrous to themselves.
