of the waterwe drink.

A most valuable suggestion appears this morning in your paper from the pen of Mr. Turner, one of our scientific engineers, in calling for a supply of water from the waterworks of Parkdale or from the Humber Bay.

It is many years ago when it was stated by the Hon. Frank Smith, whose sagacious opinion was not to pass unnoticed, that we never would have an ample supply of pure water until it was brought from the Humber Bay. Let us set to work and have this done and there will be no more complaints about dry lawns, flowers fading and the quality of water dangerous for house use. Taxpayer.

The Scott Act in Grangeville.

Editor World: Your telegraphed news from Orangeville gave an account of the foolshames of some hotel keepers in beating a man who served a Scott Act warrant on them. The Orangeville papers supply full particulars. The warrant-server, Hall, was a man who lived by daily supplying these hotels with registables, etc. This aggravated his conduct in aiding in the enforcement of a wicked and yrannical law which is intended to oppress and rob hotel keepers. While forbearance is always to be commended, manly and sensible men will not condenn too severely the hotel keepers who, incensed by the injustice of the Scott Act, take the law into their own hands. The cansure should be chiefly on the supporters of that law and the miserable men whose fampaticism or greed leads them to attempt its sufforcement. Let us have manly—not namby-pannly somitment on this matter. Whatever occasional outrages there are by anti-Scott Act men, their forbearance against the standing outrage of this miserable law is rather surprising than otherwise. Fair Plax.

A Pilfering Romestic.

Sarah Baxter, aged 18, of No. 7 Robertage, in the East End, was employed as a mestic in the house of Mrs. T. S. Harrison 308 Berkeley-street. Mrs. Harrison's other, Mrs. Smallpiece, lives next door. The mother, Mrs. Smallpiece, lives next door. The girl had free access also to the latter house. During her periodical visits thereto, she manged to steal several articles of old English ewelry, the property of Mrs. Smallpiece. Among them was a gold seal, a gold chain, a locket, a pencil-case and other articles. The girl was suspected when the articles were missed, and the case was given to Detective Black. Saturday afternoon he arrested Miss Baxter at her father's residence. The stolen articles were also recovered, the girl having given them to a young man named Bailey, the resides at No. 5 Robert-place.

a season as joint manager with Mr. Hudson of Brooklyn, of Mr. F. B. Warde, the famous tragedian. Mr. Toy claims the distinction of being the "youngest manager in the business"; it certainly he is one of the brightest. The World will not be surprised to see him one of these days financing a metropolitan play house or putting up for "the strongest attraction on the road."

"Did we have a good season? I should smile. We put in forty-six weeks, and visited all the first-class towns and all the first-class theatres in the Union. In many places Mr. Warde played against the strongest attractions known, but you can just dot down that we held our own; and every place we visited we lived on cakes and ale, beside paying salaries and swelling our bank account. Mr. Warde is a great favorie in the West and in California. Our season was exceptionally good."

Mr. Toy regaled The World and a few friends with many amusing stories of the road. Like every young manager he makes it a point to remember all he sees and hears. Toy will remain in his native Toronto until about Aug. 28, when he leaves for Des Moines, I.a., where next season's tour will be opened on Sept. 1. It will interest his friends to know that Toy looks handsome and happy, the very embodiment of past, present and future prosperity.

A Messenger Boy's Strange Story.
George Dennis, a Northwestern Telegraph messenger boy living at No. 57 Richmondstreet, west told a strange story to the police at the Agnes-street Station Saturday night. In proof of the correctness of his story he exhibited his cap, which he said had been perforated by a bullet. Dennis related that about 10 o'clock as he was walking through Brunswickavenue a tall man snatched some papers which he was carrying in his hand; that upon his derivating their velocity that and deviated as the said deviated by their velocity he was carrying in his hand; any in the Old Country. It is being built by Smith & Co. of St. Catharines, the well-known builders of the Welland Canal. They have quite an army of men at work blasting, excavating and laying brick. The Lawn Sprinkler. Uprose the sun all wide awake, One sultry summer dawning; His rays fell on a rubber snake, Outstretched beneath an awning. The nozzle gleamed like burnished gold, In hand of him who held it;

A stoutish party, rather old, Who smilingly upheld it. He squirted all his new brick house, And all his picket fencing; Each separate shutter well did dous. And set the shrubs a-dancing.

He squirted all the boulevard, The trees looked as if weeping; He turned it into the backyard, Till every thing was dripping.

Upon the street he turned the sprint, In chinks of the block paving; He poured the water without stir. The air with moisture laving.

From the blue arch at fervid noon, The sun still saw him squirting: While he would hum a little tune, Or do a little firting. And when down to the west he drew, In golden splendor glowing; The last long shadow that he threw Was his—the stream still throwing.

Calm rose the moon o'erfi eld and town. Out came the stars a-twinkling; And as I live, when they blinkled down,

There was he still a-sprinkling!
