TACOMA TRADE.

The Tacoma West Coast Trade says: "The week has brought a greatly improved tone to the general condition of affairs throughout the country. The results of the recent elections have, temporarily, at least, caused the return of a feeling of confidence among the investor class, and the feeling is pretty general that money will be seeking fields for operation again. Even wheat has taken a slight turn for the better, and the week marks a  $\frac{1}{2}$  advance, the first that has occurred since the season opened. Business in retail lines throughout the Pacific Northwest has been seasonably good, and though recent suspensions have somewhat affected the volume of distribution in a wholesale way, these results have been largely anticipated beforehand, and with a resumption of these firms or the opening of new wholesale houses, which will certainly not be long delayed, the jobbing trade will resume former proportions. Shipping has continued to show considerable activity and its steady branching out and development is attracting the attention of capitalists to this section, as the most promising point for the establishment of manufacturing and industrial enterprises. Cheap fuel, and building material, unapproachable facilities for distribution, not only by water but by rail, are among the factors that are going to add largely to our manufactured output in the near future, the present appearances seem to
