Principal Sir Arthur Currie, L.L.D.,
McGill University,
Montreal, Canada.

Dear Sir Arthur:

I write to ask if in your judgment it would be practicable to arrange for a discussion meeting on the revival of the University magazine of which you may remember I spoke at the New York dinner of McGill graduates last year. Since then I have had several conferences with my fellow graduate, Mr. Francis Wickware, and have received an encouraging letter from the leading representative of the Dalhousie Review. It would seem as though the time were now ripe for some concerted action.

It so happens that I am to deliver an address in Montreal early in May and would willingly remain over a day or two if arrangements could be made for assembling a few interested graduates to push the project further. Little headway can be made by correspondence, whereas a round table discussion is likely to result in definite and prompt action. Perhaps you will be good enough to refer my suggestion (if you approve of it) to someone who would take it in charge and communicate with me direct.

Besides the modest legacy I am leaving my Alma Mater, I want to ~~do~~ everything possible in the limited free time at my disposal to help resuscitate, under a new name and with a staff representing all the Universities of Canada, the noble McGill Magazine, justly ranked among the leading university publications of our continent.
