

of one to each 3,100 accounts, or one to each 8,770 transactions. If the analogy in the relations between labour and achievement be as close as these figures indicate, the Canadian Department may feel encouraged, the British Post Office Savings Bank being deservedly and universally looked upon as a model of organization and successful administration.