HERE IS THE CONSTABLE BILL

Mr. Hardy Defends It, Denies That He Retreated and Promises to Prevent Protests by "Men of Straw"-Second Reading Thursday.

If a member is unseated as a result of the trial of any of the aforesaid petitions by reason of the disallowance of the vote of any person included in any of the classes of persons whose right to vote is the subject of any of the questions set out in Schedule "A," or partly by reason thereof and partly for some other reason, the seat shall not be given to any candidate, but the election shall be declared void, and thereafter a new election shall be held as in other cases, anything in the election laws to the contrary notwithstanding; but nothing in this section shall prevent an appeal from the trial judges to the Court of Appeal.

whereas a question has been raised since the last general election as to the legal right of any electors to vote who have been appointed or required by returning officers or deputy returning officers to act as constables or special constables at elections or on polling day, as well as of persons who have performed other services or furnished necessary things for the purpose of enabling returning officers to carry out the requirements of the Ontario Election Act; and whereas numerous petitions have been filed complaining of the undue election or return of certain members at the said general election in and by which the said question is raised, and in which it is claimed that such votes are unlawful; and whereas electors so acting have is claimed that such votes are unlawful; and whereas electors so acting have always exercised the right to vote at elections for the Legislative Assembly, and such right has been always heretofore acquiesced in; and whereas in order to obtain a speedy decision on the said point and to save unnecessary expense and trouble in litigation, it is expedient that provision be made for the disposal of the said question by the court before the parties are obliged to take further proceedings in connection with petitions in or under which such question is or may be raised; and whereas for the purpose of obtaining a decourt before the parties are obliged to take further proceedings in connection with petitions in or under which such question is or may be raised; and whereas for the purpose of obtaining a decision on the said point certain questions were submitted to the Court of Appeal by Order-in-Countil of the 10th day of June, 1898, for the opinion of the court under chapter 84 of the Revised Statutes of 1897; and whereas as it is expedient that other questions should be substituted for those so submitted as aforesaid; * * *

Why He Left It to Court of Appeal. Why He Left It to Court of Appeal.

As he neared conclusion the Attorney-General explained why he had preferred the Court of Appeal to the trial judges. He had done so because he had felt that it would be placing too much responsibility on any single judge to have the political destiny of the province, the fate of two parties, depending on his decision, however learned he might be. Then there was the possibility that one judge might decide one way and another another. This would be manifestly unfair, and unsatisfactory. Was it not, he asked, a statesmanlike, wise and prudent resolution to have the matter left to a ruit court, to the court of ultimate resort? Their dict of the polls as well as to render themselves liable to a penalty for infraction of the law." Taking up what he believed were a number of new arguments not yet adduced in his favor, he held first that the fact that both parties up to 1887 had for 50 years tacitly recognized the right of the constables to vote, should be a significant factor in the consideration of the question. He had in fact never heard the slightest doubt on the subject given expression to.

Four years ago the Government had met wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the wise to take the matter up so late in the season and without a full court and, therefore, he had called Parliament together. A third and most important reason, he claimed, was that it would save members endless expense in litigation. He knew now incember of the House had been runed in years gone by in election trials. Then, amid the applauding assent of the whole House had been runed in years gone by in election trials. Then, amid the applauding assent of the whole House had collection trials. Then, amid the applauding assent of the whole House had been runed in years gone by in election trials. Then, amid the applauding assent of the whole House had been runed in favor of passing a law to prevent a man of straw, who could not pay his own costs, protesting a member's election. He engaged to take some steps in the near future to introduce legislation to prevent this startling scandal connected with the administration of justice.

slightest doubt on the subject given expression to.

Four years ago the Government had met the House with the slim majority of seven, or, including West Kent, of nine; there had been no effort then to apply a legal quibble of the kind to deprive the Government had at one time comment of that majority. It was true that the Government had at one time commanded a majority of 37, but it should be remembered that "no chain is stronger than its weakest link."

Constables Not All Grits.

There was no questioning the right of Oppositionists to assume that returning and deputy returning officers were friends of the Government in power, but the constables, for a variety of reasons, were often not so. For instance, they might be appointed because they held the property wanted as a polling booth. If the Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas and all the line of able lawyers on both sides offered no protest there was no reason to assume that constables of to-day should be disfranchised. The Act of 1868 and 1869, it was true, held returning officers, deputy returning officers and poll clerks to be disqualfied, the Legislature thereby implying that they had not been so before. Sir Oliver Mowat, in 1874, in passing an act entranchising them, had made no mention of constables, thereby implying that they had not been so before. England's Common Law Quoted.

The Common Law of England Mr, Hardy also brought to bear. He quoted "Rogers on Elections," where he said, "All free men in England" had a right to elect their respective knights to represent the boroughs. That was the foundation law and, unless some later law embodied a different and amending principle, it must hold good. From the earliest dawn of Parliamentary history, therefore, only two qualifications for the franchise were recognized: the voter must be a free man and resident in his borough. There could be no disfran-
