DRIVER CARELESS, IS JURY VERDICT

Finds Him Negligent When His Auto Struck Gertrude Lacey.

"We find that Gertrude Lacey, aged 15, came to her death on Nov. 4th, at the corner of College street and Hochmoppe avenue, as a result of injuries received from being struck by an auto driven by Mr. John Sirra, and as a result of the opinion that the motor car was driven carelessly and in a manner dangerous to public safety."

Such was the verdict brought in at the inquest last night. The girl got into a Metropolitan and had hardly cleared another motor when she was twenty-five and Mr. Sirra proceeded to drive his car within three to five feet she ran down slowly from twelve to fifteen feet, she slipped into the ditch. His car proceeded into the ditch for another 120 feet before coming to a standstill.

P. C. Twigg, who made a test with the car, said that he stopped within five feet, going about fifteen miles an hour.

Both Mr. Sirra's sons who were with him at the time of the accident, corroborated the statement of the driver, and thought that the car was striking a Hydro pole.

Mr. Snyder: "Don't you think it was a highly dangerous thing to leave a girl alone on a road to pass between your car and the other one she was passing?"

Coroner M. Crawford, in his summing up, said that motor drivers had a tendency not to stop and make good away from Toronto. Mr. Sirra appeared for the crown and Mr. Peter White, K.C., for the defence, assisted by Mr. Schaefer.

STRANGE WOOING DONE BY ORFORD

Used Hymns, Prayers and Prayers, According to Wife's Evidence.

Hymns, prayers, coercion and prayers were part of the tactics used by her husband in wooing her, according to the evidence given by Mrs. Frederick Orford on the witness stand at Orford Hall yesterday. The case is against Orford, who is a Toronto real estate man, who has a yearly income of $2,000. She asks $500 a month interim alimony.

The evidence she proposed to give of what transpired immediately subsequent to her marriage in August, 1913, was of such a nature that Mr. Justice Orde asked the jury to return a verdict of acquittal. The case of everyone except Orford, the police and court officials.

Mrs. Orford, according to her evidence, came to Canada in 1910 and met Orford some time later through an acquaintance. Orford had procured a room for her when she had to leave the lodgings in a landlady's house. She was then in, because the landlady objected to her teaching vocal music.

The next phase of the matter was when the landlady of the room in which Orford lived, Mrs. Partridge, became ill. Orford became very kind to her and did not know what to do, and took her to a rooming house, where he was staying, and secured another room for her.

Mrs. Orford then suggested that she should go to New York with him, and she agreed to do so. She studied New Thought religion, it said Orford.

Mrs. Orford said that she was rather timid. She thought that the request peculiar, but she went to go on the understanding that they were to have separate rooms, and that her room was to be rented to her.

In Single Room. When Miss Partridge arrived at New York she went up to the rooms which Mrs. Orford had secured for her. She was in one suite—two bedrooms and a bathroom. She objected, she said, and was very nervous on the first night, not taking her clothes off the first night. The second night she went with Orford to a new thought meeting. He offered to put in a piano for her, so that she could make music, and sing hymns. He asked her to sing "Some Day the Silver Chord Will Ring."

That evening, she said, he asked her to drink a glass of lemonade. While he was preparing it she slipped into a mirror and saw him drop some things into the glass. She accused him of doctoring it, and he denied it. "If you haven't drunk it yourself," she said, "I won't drink it."

Mrs. Orford said that Mr. Orford drank and slept, and that she became very drowsy. As he was sitting on the bed, she saw a cotton wool, some of chloroform with which she emptied the chloroform away. She asked her to forgive him and to pray with him, and they knelt together.

Justice Orde wanted to know why she did not call some feminine friend on the telephone and get help from Mr. Orford. She said she had no friends. "It was extraordinary," he said, "that she didn't get help from a friend."

On the return from Muskoka she said Mr. Orford proposed to her and she accepted. They were married in Toronto. There he proposed again and produced a ring. She refused to take it, and he denied it. She caught up her grip and was leaving him when he told her that she was his only woman and begged her forgiveness.

"I felt in the clutches of Mr. Orford," she said.

She promised to marry him if he took her to the next day she saw a great bouquet of white flowers and a foot stool and told that he had put that where she found it. She said she was very sorry. The wedding took place with Mr. Orford as best man. She was upheld by the event by brandy.

STEALS CASH THEN TIES HERSELF UP

Woman Tries Clever Trick, But Detectives Get at the Truth.

It is almost always the smallest detail that has been overlooked that lands a clever thief in the hands of the police. West was the case of Mrs. Alice Brickett of Brooklyn, N.Y., a 28-year-old French-Canadian widow, who until early yesterday morning was being held in the office of the Grace Hotel.

Mrs. Barber was found at 4:15 yesterday morning lying on the floor by the elevator operator, bound and gagged, and gagged, her face scratched and bleeding. The police have also been advised that Mrs. Barber had told them she had been robbed of $200 in the office of the Grace Hotel.

The police were immediately notified and a few minutes later Detective Moses Mulholland and Frank Gass, who were in a police car, followed in a few minutes by Detective Wilbur Dawn, Bart Cronin and Frank Wickert.

To the officers the woman stated that three men, all armed, had entered the office, overpowered her and bound and gagged her and rifled the office of the $200 in cash. She told her story without hesitation and gave the officers a description of the burglars.

Examination of the drawers in which the money was kept, however, revealed the fact that they had been opened with a key. This was a suspicious circumstance in view of the fact that the house had but to open the drawers with the keys which were in the woman's possession. They then went to the woman's rooming house on Ann street and there learned from the landlady and roomers that Mrs. Barber had told them she had been held up in almost identically the same manner in the G. N. W. office in Buffalo. At that time detectives scoured the city in quest of the burglars without success.

When taken to court street police station, where she was searched by the police matron, another $19 was found hidden in the woman's shoe. Mrs. Barber then broke down, confessing that she had committed the robbery, after which she fled, herself up and scratched herself to add a touch of reality to the whole proceeding.

WAR'S AFTERMATH IS NOT HARMFUL

Physical Condition of Students Subject of Interesting Test at Hart House.

Soldier students at the University of Toronto have not fallen away in condition of weight since the war, is the report of the physical directorate at Hart House, where Dr. Barton and his staff have just completed an examination of the physical condition of soldiers who have resumed their studies. This examination was thorough enough to determine whether the sharp transition from military to civilian life was harmful to normal conditions having an appreciable effect upon a man's system. All ex-soldiers were carefully weighed and measured when coming up for their first year, and recently these men were again examined and the records checked. This examination showed that some gained weight in weight, and that the majority showed a better physical condition.

DISORDERLY SCENE IN BRITISH HOUSE

Devlin Asks Question and Member Grapples With Him.

London, Nov. 22.—Two members of the house of commons came to blows this afternoon during the question period, with the Irish situation under discussion. They were Joseph Devlin, Nationalist, and Maj. John Molson, Coalition-Unionist. The sitting was temporarily suspended. Peace was made after Major Molson had apologized. Mr. Devlin accepting the apology.

The beginning of the trouble came while Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, was reading the details of yesterday's assassination in Dublin to the house. There was a dead silence except for occasional murmurs, and when he had finished appreciable time elapsed before a single voice dared to ask a question. The speaker, in fact, was Sir William Hamar Davidson, who had given notice of an emergency question, when Mr. Devlin rose and was heard to say: "May I ask—"

There immediately rose a chorus of angry cries of "No, sit down!" Mr. Devlin resumed his seat, but apparently under a misapprehension, as directly upon Sir William rising to answer his question the Nationalist also rose. He was received with renewed cries of "Will suppress Murder." The speaker, in fact, was Sir William Hamar Davidson, who had given notice of an emergency question, when Mr. Devlin rose and was heard to say: "May I ask—"
